Big News About Babies A Pittsburgh Monument Beware of Fluffy Hair England Lets Them Talk

By Arthur Brisbane

This is A NEW kind of news.

Some years ago Haldane, British biologist, predicted, for man and other animals, "eugenetic" birth, which means creation of living beings, outside the body of the mother.

Haldane expects the being to start and finish its development in a scientific test tube, and the thing has been partially accomplished by Dr. Gregory Pincus, of Harvard's Biological Institute, experimenting with rabbits.

Details of the process are not for general discussion, but everybody would want to know that actual creation of mammals, to which tribe we humans belong, entirely away from the actual mother, is a certain possibility.

Furthermore, while a mother is necessary to give the new being its primitive "ovarian" start, no father is actually necessary. A salt solution, or heat, takes the father's place.

Under such conditions, children would be females, therefore an "all-female" world is theoretically possible.

Further, it would be possible for any woman of exceptional ability to have twelve different children every year, one each month, with or without a human father, without inconvenience of child-bearing or childbirth. The twelve children would be transplanted at the very start, one a month, and brought to full development in the bodies of "foster mothers," thus pushing to the extreme the "wet nursing" process. This will never happen, it is to be hoped, but that it actually could happen is a scientific fact.

When Pittsburgh is through with the disaster that has almost overwhelmed the city, a monument should be erected in a park, or on the mountainside, in honor of the courage and reduperative energy of the great industrial city. With lights turned off, water flooding the streets, many men and women calmly continued their work, wearing coal miner's light-bearing caps, like so many gigantic glow worms. Americans still possess resourcefulness and can do what they must do.

Miss Tallulah Bankhead, of stage fame, sat in court, heard Miss Vera Stretz, with "her blonde hair fluffed like a halo about her head," regretfully tell judge, jury and crowd how, and why, she killed her friend, the late Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, German aviation ace in the big war.

Dr. Gebhardt, it seems, told the golden-fluffy-haired one that he was an unusual man, and "it would take an unusual person to understand him. Ordinary laws were made for ordinary men; BUT he was not an ordinary man."

Miss Stretz had only an ordinary revolver, but she disposed of the extraordinary man.

According to the prosecution, he was slow about proposing marriage to Miss Vera, was attentive to another lady. In addition, he had a wife and children in Germany.

The story of Vera Stretz re-

2 FACE OUSTER IN 'SHAKEDOWN'

Two deputy collectors of the Internal Revnue Bureau in Boston faced dismissal in connection with an alleged "shakedown racket" in connection with the payment of taxes on contraband liquors. It was learned today.

Names of the deputy collectors were withheld, but it was ascertained one of them has been with the service for more than 10 years, and is the father of a large family.

The other man, it was learned, has been with the department a short time.

Internal Revenue Collector William M. Welch admitted that complaints have been received against the men, but he would not comment on the case.

It was said the Intelligence Bureau of the Internal Revenue Department has investigated the two deputy collectors.

It was reported that a former bootlegger of a summer resort is alleged to have demanded "satisfaction" for the "efficiency and garrulous conduct" of one of them during the prohibition era.

'NO REPRIEVE,' HOFFMAN DECLARES

Trenton, March 28 (INS)—Governor Hoffman today was given legal opinion that he has constitutional power to grant other reprieves, but declared Bruno Hauptmann, who was scheduled to die in the electric chair Tuesday night.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., March 28 (AP)—The chances of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's escaping electrocution next Tuesday night fell perceptibly today when Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said he had "no intention" of issuing another reprieve.

The governor, who said he would "gladly" stay the execution of the condemned Lindbergh baby killer if he had the legal right, called the court of pardons to meet Monday to consider Hauptmann's second plea for clemency.

There is doubt, however, that the prisoner's appeal would be successful.

Kimberling Will Act

Trenton, N. J., March 28 (INS)—If Gov. Harold G. Hoffman grants Bruno Richard Hauptmann a new reprieve and Attorney General David T. Wilentz overrules the governor, the condemned man will die on schedule next Tuesday night.

"If the attorney general says I am legally bound to carry out the order of the court, and disregard the governor, that is what I am going to do," Colonel Kimberling said.

IRISH CHIEF IN SWISS HOSPITAL

Zurich, Switzerland, March 28 (INS)—President Eamon De Valera of the Irish Free State was operated upon at a clinic here Thursday for removal of cataracts from his eyes, it was learned today.

De Valera will be kept blindfolded in a darkened room until Tuesday.

Dr. Alfred Vogt, who performed the operation, declared he was unable to make a statement regarding De Valera's condition until Tuesday, when it will be known whether he will be blind or the operation will be a success.

De Valera, it is learned, suffered from a peculiarly hard cataract which began forming 18 months ago.

According to Dr. Vogt, the cataract was much advanced and had hardened to such an extent it was difficult to remove it without injuring the cornea.

Extraordinary measures were taken to keep De Valera's presence in Zurich a secret. It was not mentioned in the Swiss press.

London specialists gave up the case, and advised De Valera his only chance to avert blindness was to go immediately to Zurich.

source pointed out, is not a law tribunal. It is a mercy court, and a convict appearing before it must admit guilt and beg for mercy. This Hauptmann has refused to do, persistently professing innocence.

NOT FAIRLY TRIED

Governor Hoffman, in a lengthy interview with the Associated Press, reaffirmed his belief that Hauptmann was not fairly tried, that some evidence against him was open to serious doubt, and that the murder of the infant son of Colonel and Charles A. Lindbergh March 1, 1932, was the crime of more than one person.

"My one desire has been to see that justice is done, and that the Lindbergh mystery is fully solved," he said. "When I granted a reprieve in January I was informed I was within my legal rights and there also was the matter of precedent.

"Any number of governors have so acted. I have been informed that my legal right to grant a further reprieve has now expired."

GOT ADVICE

The Governor said he had consulted legal authorities other than the attorney-general for advice.

He asserted there was "plenty of evidence" for a court to consider, but would not comment whether it would come before the Court of Pardons, of which he is a member.

"Have you visited Hauptmann since your trip to the death house last October?"

"I have not."

"Have there been any further requests from Hauptmann to see you?"

"None."

"Have you seen Dr. Condon ("Jafsie," the ransom intermediary) yet?"

"I have not."

"Do you intend to see him?"

"That would be futile. I will not visit him in his home and the conditions he has outlined would make it impossible for me to question him as I desire."

Several months ago the Governor expressed a wish to question Dr. Condon in connection with the case. At that time, Dr. Condon was on a cruise in southern seas.

When the former witness returned, the governor renewed his efforts and Dr. Condon finally said he would talk with him at his home in the Bronx, with prosecution attorneys present and with the understanding the questions and answers were given in writing.

"Governor, regardless of whether Hauptmann dies in the electric chair Tuesday night, will you continue your investigation of the Lindbergh case?"

"I shall. I believe several persons were involved in the kidnaping and I intend doing everything I can to obtain a full solution. One reason why several persons want Hauptmann to die Tuesday night is their belief his death will end interest in the case and discrepancies will be forgotten."

NO DEFINITE PLAN

"Have you a definite plan through which to pursue the investigation?"

"Not yet."

The governor made no secret that he now is pressing the investigation vigorously. Even as he talked there were telephone calls and telegrams in connection with the case. In another room Robert W. Hicks, Washington criminologist, waited to report to him.

Hicks returned by plane today from Havana, Cuba, where he has been investigating certain phases of the case.

He checked on a report that Isador Fisch, friend of Hauptmann now dead, had offered to sell in Havana some of the "hot" money—presumably part of the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

If substantiated, the story would bolster Hauptmann's contention that the ransom money found in his possession came to him from Fisch.

LONEY TO AID

Governor Hoffman also received word from Secretary Ickes of the Department of Interior, that Edward W. Loney, a department wood tester, had his permission to continue investigation of the Hauptmann case, but "strictly in a personal, private capacity."

At the same time the Department of Justice at Washington made clear that so far as that branch of the Federal government was concerned, the Lindbergh case was closed.

Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., the Hunterdon County prosecutor whom the Governor, in a scathing attack yesterday, dubbed the "errand boy for the attorney general," Hauck said, "than the errand boy of a murderer."

This charge was exchange between the chief executive and the chief assistant of the attorney-general in the Hauptmann case came in the midst of a last effort by Hauptmann's chief of counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher, to have the court of pardons consider a new plea for commutation of the death sentence.

A previous appeal to the pardons court was denied. Hauptmann's counsel said he had "new evidence" on which to base a request for a new trial if the court of pardons appeal fails. He declined to say what the evidence was.

In discussing the move of Governor Hoffman in Washington today, PWA Administrator Ickes said Loney would be given leave if it applied for it.

Loney, who has expressed belief that rail 16 of the kidnap ladder was not made of wood from the attic of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's Bronx home, accompanied Hoffman to the Hauptmann house Thursday.

He suggested a further 30-day reprieve for the carpenter.

Loney was not at his PWA office today, and left his apartment this morning.

PERSONAL PREROGATIVE

In his reply to Hoffman, Ickes reiterated that the permission given Loney to testify in the trial still held, but that Loney's participation in the case "must necessarily be strictly in a personal, private capacity."

Ickes sent this telegram to Hoffman, collect:

"When Arch V. Loney asked my consent to appear as witness at Hauptmann's trial, I told him that it was a matter personal to himself.

"That is still my position."

"He is now on leave and if he wants to apply for additional leave, it will be granted to him, and he can use the time in any manner consistent with what he regards as his duty as a citizen.

"There is no need to ask my consent to permit him to give any advice or opinion, as I carefully explained to him on prior occasions.

"Any participation by him in this matter must necessarily be strictly in a personal, private capacity."

Hauptmann Guilty, Wilentz Declares

Perth Amboy, N. J., March 28 (AP)—Attorney General David T. Wilentz said today that Bruno Richard Hauptmann "is as guilty today as he was the day he was convicted."

He declined to make public his position regarding another gubernatorial reprieve for the convicted kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby, saying Governor Harold G. Hoffman had indicated he would ask him his opinion and that he would "withhold it until that time."

Grynkraut, Lynn Leather Man, Dies

Adolph O. Grynkraut, prominent Lynn leather manufacturer, of Lynn Shore Drive, died this morning at the J. B. Thomas Hospital in Peabody following a short illness. He was vice-president of the Diamond-Grynkraut Kid Company of Peabody.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at St. Joseph's Church, Lynn.

He is survived by his widow, Marguerite de Mourlasa Grynkraut, a daughter, Marguerite, and two sons, John and Francis.

CARDINAL RETURNS, HEALTH PERFECT

The Cardinal appeared to be in perfect health and assured that reports he had been ill were erroneous.

The Cardinal was accompanied on his trip home by the Rt. Rev. M. J. Splaine, the Rev. J. F. Coppinger and the Rev. J. F. Minihan.

The Cardinal, now 76 years old, told reporters in his stateroom he was feeling well and was glad to be back in Boston again.

INQUIRES ABOUT FLOOD

Although he gave no formal interview he inquired from reporters as to flood conditions.

He was especially interested in the flood situation in Lowell, his birthplace.

While walking from the ship to his car, which was waiting on the pier, the Cardinal said:

"It seems grand to be back once again and to be greeted with such beautiful weather.

"We experienced a rather cold season in the Bermudas, but from reports New England weather was none too good.

The Cardinal said he had spent considerable time writing. When asked as to the nature of the writing he smilingly answered that it was not of great importance at this time.

He went directly to his Lake street residence. Following a short rest he took up the task of answering correspondence that had accumulated during his vacation.

It was said by the Cardinal's aides that His Eminence would spend the next few days preparing the annual Easter message to his flock.

SIMONDS HALTS NAZI COMPLAINT

Manila, March 28 (AP) — Alvan T. Simonds, Boston manufacturer, changed his mind today about protesting to Philippine High Commissioner Frank Murphy concerning alleged conduct of fellow passengers aboard the German liner Rellance. He said he would withhold comment until he reaches the United States.

Police guards were assigned to Simonds and his wife on their arrival yesterday on the world touring liner, when he expressed fears of being attacked after criticizing the Nazi government.

Simonds conceded the officers and crew of the ship treated them fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Simonds will sail for the United States Monday aboard the Empress of Canada.

Upper Mississippi Flood Warning

Lacrosse, Wis., March 28 (INS) —Merchants were warned today to remove perishable merchandise from river front basements as the Mississippi river slowly neared flood stage in this area.

Tributaries in western Wisconsin and eastern Minnesota, swollen by melting snows and rain storms, brought fears of flood as they poured into the Mississippi.

Cairo, Ill., March 28 (INS)—Lowland dwellers moved to the hills today as the Ohio river continued its rise in this region and threatened to inundate thousands of valley acres.

As the Ohio passed flood stage here, where it empties into the Mississippi, for the first time in recorded history it was above flood stage along its entire course.

Girl Poisoning Laid to Mother

Greenville, Tex., March 28 (AP)— Mrs. Velma Patterson, 34, a widow, today was charged with the death of her 12-year-old daughter, Dorothy, by poisoning. She previously had been charged with the death of another daughter, 11 years old.

Redstone Resignation O. K.

Governor Curley announced this afternoon that he would accept the resignation of Edward H. Redstone, state librarian, who has been appointed supervisor of the reference department of the Boston Public Library.

Life of Ease For Winners

From the instant he perched on their piazza 18 months ago, the little puff-ball of a canary has brought luck into the Lynn home of Sweepstakes Queens Rose Langelier and Reva Shontell.

And so, naturally, they call him "Lucky."

Today, he was making the welkin ring as the buzz of the doorbell and the telephone added to the merry din in the Langelier parlor.

"He seems to know," said happy Miss Langelier, Lynn switchboard operator, who shared with her friend, Miss Shontell, a $150,000 winning ticket on Reynoldstown. "He's been chirping like mad all morning, and has been acting very haughty with us all. He'll probably be demanding better rations any day now."

Both girls have planned to invest their winnings through their banks and later, when the excitement over their good fortuns has died down somewhat, they will take a trip.

"I mean to invest in a permanent income plan, certainly," said Miss Langelier. "The pleasantest thing about winning is me is that now I will have financial security.

"No, I haven't any marrying plans. Neither has Reva. She will continue living with us until she decides on the home she purposes to buy in Lynn for herself and her mother, who is now living in Hartford."

The attractive Miss Langelier insists that there hasn't been a hint of a proposal in the many letters and telegrams that have been showering into her home since yesterday.

$5,000,000 Heiress Builds Race Track

New York, March 28 (AP)—The New York Post says Mrs. Eugenia Clay Smith, the red-headed heiress to the five million dollar Arbuckle coffee fortune, has gone into the race track business and is also planning another marriage.

Mrs. Smith would not disclose the name of her second husband-to-be, but said he is a Viennese actor who has recently obtained a divorce from his wife.

Her racetrack has been built at her coast property in Delmar, south of Los Angeles, the Post said Mrs. Smith and Bing Crosby, the crooner, will race their horses under the same silks.

Governor Departs For N. Y. Speech

Governor Curley left Boston this afternoon for New York, where tomorrow morning he will be the principal speaker at the annual breakfast of the Holy Name Society, at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria.

He was accompanied by two secretaries. He expected to clean up a great deal of work that has accumulated during the past ten days, due to pressure of flood relief and his legislative program.

TWO RESCUED IN CAVE-IN

Lawrence, March 28—Trapped by a cave-in in a nine-foot ditch they had dug, two PWA workers narrowly escaped a lingering death today.

Prompt assistance by fellow workers saved them, but not until several minutes of feverish effort and smart team work had transpired.

The near-victims are Christopher Ready, 25, of Salem street, and Robert Bennett, 30, of Bruce street.

They were cleaning out a surface sewer behind the Ulawoca Mill in South Broadway when the embankment slipped, imprisoning their feet. The bank continued to cave steadily after the first sudden rush.

While one group struggled to hold back the steady pressure of the crumbling bank, the others pulled the two men free.

minds unusual men and others, that all women, especially those with "fluffy golden hair." If you push them too far, outrank in efficiency Nicolasha's most startling "super-man."

England believes in NOT sitting on the safety valve, which is a man's mouth. Let that function freely and man becomes practically harmless. "Let them talk," is the British motto.

Yesterday, in Trafalgar square, 150 middle aged men and women, loyal to Charles I, whose head was chopped off by Cromwell, announced that the rightful King of England is Prince Ruprecht of Bavaria, a descendant of Henrietta, daughter of Charles I. No effort was made to check this "treason."

Six policemen on horseback, eight on foot, escorted the demonstrators politely and the trumpeters that sounded fanfares, in honor of the other "king" were actually borrowed from the household of King Edward VIII.

"Let them talk, as long as they do not shoot or bomb, as the British like to say, of hanging them within 3 weeks." It seems to work.

Have you $100,000? Do you like to risk your life in exciting sport? The scientists, Frederick and Mrs. Jean Piccard, offer you the opportunity at the $100,000 price. Their specialty is flying into the stratosphere. They need $100,000 for another flight. If you have the money you may go along in the gondola under the big gas bag. There are those, tired of monotony, to whom this offer would seem attractive.

WALSH SPEEDS $25,000,000 FLOOD LOANS

With Senator David I. Walsh heading an industrial relief move, a bipartisan drive developed in Congress today to appropriate $25,000,000 for relief loans to flood-wrecked industries.

Senator Walsh sought authorization for the huge appropriation from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for loans to industries injured by the flood. His move has strong backing in both branches of Congress.

"I believe Congress will enact the necessary legislation next week," said Senator Walsh today. "A rule will probably be granted in the House next Monday, insuring passage there.

$50,000 FHA LOANS

"I hope to get Senate approval before the end of the week.

"Aside from RFC loans, owners of damaged industrial plants can obtain loans from the Federal Housing Administration. The RFC will make loans to stricken industries for the purchase or repair of machinery on the theory that it will be helpful in keeping workers employed.

"Many manufacturers are interested in this form of relief. They have told me how their factories were flooded and stock damaged or destroyed. This bill should enable manufacturers to get loans to reopen their plants and put their workers back on their jobs."

WHITE EXPLAINS RELIEF

Senator Walsh said loans may be obtained up to $50,000 through local banks from FHA.

Senator White of Maine explained how New England may obtain federal flood relief. He listed four agencies through which this aid may come.

They are the Works Progress Administration, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Federal Housing Administration and Red Cross.

IMMEDIATE BURDEN

"The Red Cross and local agencies face immediate burden of feeding, clothing and sheltering the distressed people of New England," he said.

"The Works Progress Administration has authority to aid in cleaning up wreckage, debris, sewage, debris and filth. Its officials have given assurance that it will do so immediately available funds to aid in the rebuilding of bridges, highways and other public structures.

HOUSING LOANS

"Restoration and building of homes and business establishments may be done through loans from the Federal Housing Administration, which is now transferring the authority of the Housing Administration has passed both houses of Congress and now awaits the President's signature. Legislation has been prepared and will soon be introduced. I believe, whereby direct loans may be made through this corporation.

"Another hope is through non-profit sharing corporations, originally set up to afford relief from fire damage. The law has been so amended that these corporations may apply for funds now in possession of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for flood relief."

Rep. Gen. William F. Ladd said today that withdrawal of the Connecticut national guard from the flooded areas will begin tomorrow. Naval militia units and the governor's foot guard, comprising 200 men, will be the first demobilized.

Springfield Regains Half Electric Service

Springfield, Mass., March 28 (AP)—Electric service was partly restored to half of the retail business district and cablemen were seeking to establish power for the large industrial plants in the North End.

It was reported that condition of customers' basements was now the large obstacle to restoration of light and power.

The Naval Reserve units were dismissed today. Refugees are now concentrated in a ripple high school building and total less than 1400.

Service Resumed by Boston & Maine

Boston & Maine railroad officials announced today that its line from Springfield to White River Junction, Vt., and beyond to Wells River, Vt., and Woodsville, N. H. resumed service today.

Limited service between Boston and Nashua, N. H., is expected Monday, and freight service tomorrow.

J. A. Cook, Artist, Dies in Gloucester

Wire Seizure Condemned

Shouse Demands Senate Sift FCC

Washington, March 28 (US)—Charging "definite falsification" in the Federal Communications Commission report on seizure of private telegrams, Jouett Shouse has urged appointment of a special Senate committee to sift the facts and "get the truth."

Shouse, president of the American Liberty League, assailed the FCC report which was sent to the Senate under the Borah resolution of March 17.

In a radio broadcast in which he condemned the wholesale seizure of private telegrams and the explanations of the FCC as "filled with halftruths and evasions," Shouse said:

"I urge the Senate to appoint a special investigating committee of impartial Senators of both parties and that that committee call before it and take the sworn testimony of Dr. Irvin Stewart, a member of the Federal Communications Commission; Mr. Robert T. Barley, director of the telegraph division of that commission; the Washington superintendents and attorney of the two telegraph companies, and of the R. C. A. Communications Company and Mackay Radio & Telegraph Company.

"ACCESS DEMANDED"

"I assert that such an investigation will disclose these facts:

"First—That headed, in each instance, by an employe of the Federal Communications Commission, and acting under the power which the law gave that commission, employes of the Black committee for several months, beginning in the fall of 1935 and ending in January, 1936, continuously examined telegrams in the offices of the telegraph companies in Washington that they demanded access, and were given access, to all telegrams sent out of or received in Washington, without specifying the names of the senders or the receivers.

"Second—That the description of the telegrams which the Black Committee called for was so worded that it was as utterly impossible to select those telegrams without having access to all telegrams.

"Third—That in one of the telegraph offices a Federal Communications Commission employe was assisted part of the time by four and most of the time by seven employes of the Black committee.

"23,000 WIRES COPIED"

"Fourth—That more than 22,000 telegrams sent from or received at Washington offices between January 1 and December 31, 1935, were copied, under the demand of the Federal Communications Commission, and turned over to the Black committee. And in passing here to emphasize the fact that the commission reported to the Senate that it only copied 45 telegrams.

"Fifth—That in addition to the Washington office seizures, there were served on each of the two telegraph companies over a thousand subpoenas relating to other cities calling, in general terms, for all messages sent or received by persons, firms or corporations named in the subpoenas, which subpoenas by their plain terms required that telegrams of the most private and confidential nature should be turned over to the Black committee.

"PRIVATE MESSAGES"

"Sixth—That thousands of the telegrams delivered to the Black committee under blanket subpoenas, before the court halted such actions, which were plainly of a private nature having no relation to any subject the committee was authorized to investigate, were placed in sealed envelopes on which was endorsed their private and personal character, and that those envelopes, in each after case, were opened by the investigators of the Black committee and the telegrams inspected.

"And lastly, I assert that these wholesale searches into and seizures of telegrams of the citizens of this country were carried on from September, 1935, to March, 1936, there being no let-up in it until its crass unconstitutional character caused it to be checked by the Supreme Court of the nation's capital.

"I submit that these assertions are serious enough to require the investigation which I ask the Senate to promptly order and I assure you, my listeners, that every one of these assertions will be proved to a demonstration of the Senate orders such an investigation."

COURTS ONLY CHECK

Thus far the only effective check on the inquisitorial activities of the Senate committee has been found in the federal courts, Shouse said, adding:

"Once more we have reason for thanking God that the founders of this nation saw fit to create a judicial branch co-ordinate with the legislative and executive branches and paramount in its field.

"The press of the nation has become aroused to the menace of its own integrity involved in the methods pursued by the Black committee.

"In my radio address of March 6th, I pointed out that there are literally thousands of confidential messages exchanged each year between newspaper publishers and their editors and their employes and that such messages are an integral part of the mechanics of a free press.

"Since that time we have had conclusive evidence that press messages have been subject to scrutiny at the hands of the Senate investigators. It is a notable fact that in each case the newspapers are those which have been critical of the present administration or of members of the Senate lobby committee."

"MENACE TO PRESS CENSOR"

"Such tactics are the opening wedge to censorship of the press. They strike at the very foundation of one of the essentials of constitutional self-government—a press that is free of all official influence or coercion.

Maintaining that the acts of the committee and the FCC was direct violation of the fourth article of the bill of rights in the Constitution, Shouse called upon his listeners to sign petitions of protest to the "tyrannical invasion of the fundamental rights."

Already he said many thousands of names have been received at League headquarters.

Black Pushes Lobby Registration Bill

Washington, March 28 (AP)—Chairman Black of the Senate Lobby Committee said today he would ask the Senate to consider "as early as possible" the House-approved bill by Representative Smith (D., Va.) to require registration of congressional lobbyists.

His announcement was made in the midst of discussion as to whether the measure has been weakened by an amendment offered by the author and accepted by the House.

This amendment would require organizations engaged "principally" in lobbying to report contributions made to them. The original measure provided for such reports from organizations engaged in lobbying "in whole, or in part."

Black, author of a bill against lobbying has been passed by the Senate but passed up by the House when Smith's bill, said he did not care what name appears on the measure finally enacted. He added he would attempt to remedy any weakness study may disclose in the House proposal.

Wichita Beacon Wires Returned

Washington, March 28 (INS)—All telegrams sent and received by the Wichita, Kans., Beacon which the Senate lobby committee summoned by subpoena, have been returned without inspection.

Committee investigators revealed that a checkup of the messages revealed nothing of interest to the committee, and "nothing of an unethical character."

Great Fun for Quins - - - Who's the Biggest of the Five?

Annette and Yvonne Tie -- Both Measure 30 Inches -- Other Three Lassies Trail

"We're Great, Big Girls Now"

Two feet and a half. When Nurse Leroux decided it was time to check again on the heights of her growing charges, Annette and Yvonne thought it was great fun. At the left, Yvonne (facing the camera) intently studies the measuring stick, while Annette makes sure that there is no mistake made. And the two little sisters both measured exactly 30 inches. In the middle, Yvonne (still facing camera) watches while her sister, Annette, points to where they come on the yard stick. But Annette is stretching it just a mite. At the right, Annette is suddenly filled with the urge to become taller than she really is. So up she walks onto the lap of unprotesting Nurse Leroux, who is pointing on the stick the exact height of her charges.

Kane Rites Attended by Notables

Beverly Hills, Cal., March 28 (US)—With the elite of the social world and the film colony in attendance, funeral ceremonies will be held this afternoon in the chapel of the B. E. Dayton funeral home, Beverly Hills, for Edwin Vincent Kane, 46, sportsman and writer, and well liked figure in California and New York society.

Today Mr. Kane was to have been married to Mary Lou Fisher, 18-year-old society beauty of Detroit and Hollywood.

The Rev. Neal Dodd, rector of the Church of St. Mary of the Angel, Episcopal, of Hollywood, will officiate at the funeral services.

GIRL NEAR COLLAPSE

The body will be shipped to New York tomorrow night where Mr. Kane's family will hold further funeral and burial services.

Arrangements for the special services here and shipping the body to New York were made by Miss Marion Davies, beautiful film star, who was a close friend of Mr. Kane.

AUTHORITY ON SPORT

Mr. Kane came to southern California eight years ago. He was an acknowledged authority on aquatic and equestrian sports and for some time specialized in reporting these and other sporting events for the Los Angeles Examiner.

An autopsy revealed that he died from a liver ailment with acute pulmonary congestion as a contributing factor.

'LINDY MACHINE BABY?'

But Dr. Carrell Sees Such Infant as No Boon

Berkeley, Cal., March 28 (US)—A "test tube baby" could be brought into being in the Lindbergh "artificial heart and lungs," Dr. Alexis Carrell of the Rockefeller Foundation revealed here.

The famous scientist, winner of the Nobel prize for medicine in 1912, after his last lecture in a series of four as Hitchcock professor at the University of California, declared:

"It would be entirely possible, although probably not desirable to develop a baby in the apparatus. But the expense would be enormous, and what would it prove?

"We can and will develop a kitten, but even with a very small kitten, the expense will be tremendous."

Dr. Carrel pointed out that the Lindbergh apparatus, now used for studying the body organs of lower animals in the discharge of their natural functions under glass, uses a quantity of artificial blood 2700 times the weight of the organ which is being fed by it.

When a woman in the doctor's audience suggested that while the baby experiment might not be of tremendous scientific importance, the artificial production of human infants would be a boon to women, the doctor shook his head and declared emphatically:

"It would be the ruin of women. Healthy women develop tremendously after they have had children. The more children, the better for the woman, if she is in perfect health.

"Their nervous systems are much improved—somewhat after one child, more after two, but more yet after three or four. And their looks are improved, too.

"We should conduct many more experiments along these lines. I have noticed with animals that the female is far more healthy after she has borne young. I have noticed it with dogs, cats—all the animals.

"Unfortunately, modern woman has had to forego many of the exercises that make motherhood natural.

"We should direct our research to get back to that point. Artificial production of children would take us even further in the other direction and would rob women of one of the most valuable aids to their development."

Dr. Carrel said that the problem of modern scientific research is to find a way of developing a superman, "with much greater mental power and nervous resistance," who will be capable of solving the tremendously complex problems of modern civilization.

In default of such development, he warned, civilization may eventually fall of its own weight.

Fair on Sunday, Colder Monday

Bostonians who plan to go to their summer homes in the country and at the seaside for the week-end will enjoy fair weather with rising temperature, according to the weather bureau. Sunday will be just the sort of day to clean up around the cottage and get things in order for the summer, he said.

Callander, Ont., March 28 (AP)—Yvonne Dionne celebrated her 22nd month of life today by clambering from her bed and awakening the Dafoe Hospital staff before sunrise.

It was her newest stunt, this climbing out of bed alone. Her four sisters watched with interest and it was no time at all before all five were banging at their nurses' doors.

Today's early morning performance was another indication to Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, their physician, of the marked sense of curiosity and initiative the quintuplets have developed as they near their second birthday on May 28.

AID GIRL CRIPPLE

Faces First of Five Operations

Taunton, March 28—Miss Henrietta Giroux, Taunton high school senior, a patient at Union Hospital at Fall River, where she has undergone the first of a series of operations which, it is believed, will restore the use of her legs, is most optimistic as to the outcome.

A sufferer for 16 years from infantile paralysis, the plight of the girl was made known to members of the bugle and drum corps of the Taunton Post, American Legion.

The corps had been conducting a series of parties to defray expenses of the trip to the national convention of the American Legion at Cleveland.

After an investigation the corps decided to pay the expenses of the girl at a hospital and learned that Dr. Eugene McCarthy of Fall River would take charge.

As to the Cleveland trip, that may come, but Miss Giroux is first, the corps decided.

The black haired, good looking Taunton high school senior, who is 20, was stricken with the disease when she was four. For a period she walked with cane, but in late years she had used crutches.

There are to be five operations which, doctors believe, will enable her to walk.

On her return to her home she will be attended by Miss Anna Carnes of the American Legion auxiliary, a registered nurse. The girl's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Giroux of Ray street. The father has been jobless, save for WPA work, for some time.

Science Aims To Graft New Arms on Boy

Nutley, N. J., March 28 (AP)—Sixteen-year-old John Seeley's hope for artificial restoration of arms lost last November under a train rested today on application of a 65-year-old surgical grafting principle.

A Newark orthopedic surgeon expects to apply the discovery of an Italian physician, Vanghetti, about 1870, using muscle grafts to connect artificial limbs.

The surgeon has been engaged by the crippled children's committee of the Nutley Elks Lodge. As he described the operation, a flap of the patient's skin is drawn into a tube and inserted under the muscle. This operation will be performed twice on each of the stumps of Seeley's arms.

When the tissues have healed, he said, cineplastic arms would be attached to the flaps. The artificial arms and fingers then would be operated with the flexing of the muscles.

Comedian Suicide Buried in Everett

Funeral services were conducted today in St. Aidan's Church, Brookline, for Paul T. McCullough of Windsor road, Brookline, who died Wednesday in Lawrence Memorial Hospital, two days after he had slashed his throat and wrist in a Medford barber shop.

Solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by the Rev. Francis A. Barry. Burial was at Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett.

McCullough was a member of the stage, screen and radio team of Clark and McCullough. Among those attending the funeral were Joe Cook, comedian; Bob Clark, McCullough's vaudeville partner, and Fran Ford, vice-president of the National Circus Association.

Bossy Refuses To Shake Hands

Newburyport, March 28—Overridden 6 to 1 by the school committee in the re-election of two school officials here, Mayor Andrew J. ("Bossy") Gillis refused to shake hands with the man he opposed.

The first ballot battle came when the name of Charles R. Thibadeau, superintendent of schools, came up. The entire committee voted for him. Gillis voted against. He said:

"Some conspirators who were going to get Thibadeau got cold feet."

After Thibadeau was re-elected Gillis refused to shake hands, declaring:

"I'm no handshaker."

The committee then overrode his objection to Joseph A. Kwart as high school principal by six to one, the one being Gillis' vote.

Arnold W. Collis, a committee member, lustily denied any controversy, to which Gillis replied:

"Don't get under my skin, or I'll give you the gun."

Gillis then urged the school committee to continue efforts to reduce the salaries of two school janitors. He said the two janitors get $1900 a year apiece, which, he said, was "too much to pay a man for shovelling coal and for sweeping and dusting."

"Half the city is in hock now," Gillis added.

Mansfield, O., March 28 (INS)—Ten new typhoid fever cases, making 110 thus far, were reported today as the unchecked epidemic neared the end of its second week.

ALIMONY FREEDOM

Hubby Released, Prefers Jail

Salem, March 28—Stretching his arms wide and breathing deeply of the clean, fresh air, Thomas J. O'Brien, 42, of Methuen, walked out of Salem jail today, a free man—for the time being.

O'Brien completed a three months jail sentence imposed for contempt of court for failing to pay his divorced wife, Mildred, alimony ordered when the divorce was granted.

He looked around, smiled grimly, and remarked he probably would be back in his old cell within a month. He expects that his former wife will again bring contempt proceedings against him, because he is determined not to pay her a cent of the $6 weekly which the probate court judge ordered.

O'Brien reiterated his previous remarks that he would spend the rest of his life in jail rather than pay the money.

"It's high time that harassed husbands put their foot down and refused to pay alimony," he declared.

"I've got my principles. I suppose I am setting a precedent but somebody ought to put a stop to the racket.

"I figure it will take my wife about two weeks in which to get the necessary papers and put me back in court and jail."

American Pastor Attacked by Nazis

Berlin, March 28 (AP)—The Rev. Stewart Herman of Harrisburg, Pa., acting pastor of Berlin's American church, was struck yesterday by a workman who thought Herman showed a lack of reverence for the Nazi flag, it was learned today.

The American, who was standing in a public square, was hit when he failed to salute the flag during the minute of silence decreed throughout the nation at 4 p. m.

As soon as his assailant learned the pastor was an American he disappeared in the crowd. The Rev. Mr. Herman did not report the incident to police.

ALLIES FORGING RING AROUND GERMANY

Paris, March 28 (US)—The first and most powerful link in the "iron ring" France is avowedly tightening around Germany had been finally forged today with formal exchange of signatures on the Franco-Russian military pact.

Work on what France hopes will be the second link will begin within ten days, when, according to information here, the French, British, and Belgian army general staffs will begin consultation openly intended to result in a pooling of their land, sea and air forces against any aggression by Germany.

Chancellor Hitler has repeatedly vowed Germany has no aggressive intentions.

The French are maneuvering to make out of these consultations an iron-clad military alliance with Britain, and are hopeful of doing this despite the British government's repeated declaration that the staff talks are no more than fulfillment of Britain's obligations under the Treaty of Locarno, which Hitler renounced when he remilitarized the Rhineland.

When French Foreign Minister Flandin and Russian Foreign Commissar Litvinoff exchanged their respective countries' ratifications of the military pact, France and Russia became formally bound to spring to the aid of each other, in the event either is the object of an attack in Europe.

The two largest air forces and standing armies in the world were united in what is officially a "mutual defense pact," but which Chancellor Hitler declared is an alliance "directly aimed" at Germany.

It was learned, the French cabinet decided, France must adamantly resist German fortification of the Rhineland. Britain is trying to get Hitler to pledge he will not build fortifications during the negotiations.

Hitler in Rhineland For Final Speech

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press

Cologne, March 28—With church bells tolling through the Reich, Adolf Hitler, surrounded by all his cabinet ministers, turned to Cologne today to close the Nazi election campaign with a last spirited appeal for "honor, freedom and peace."

To make the climax of the campaign virtually as spectacular as the start—marked by the remilitarization of the Rhineland—Hitler's final demand for a "yes" in tomorrow's Reichstag election was given a religious aspect.

Every German, no matter whether he was at home, on the street or in a public place, was called upon to interrupt whatever he was doing and sing "Lord, Make Us Free," just as Der Fuehrer mounts his Rhineland rostrum tonight to deliver his last dictum.

The tolling bells of the famous Cologne Cathedral, with which those of all churches will chime, will herald the beginning of the national singing of the hymn, the "Dankgebet," and the opening of churches for special prayers.

Enthusiasm ran high here in the Rhineland, to which Hitler sent his troops March 7 in defiance of the Locarno pact and Versailles treaty—the action which Der Fuehrer sought all Germany to approve by its vote in tomorrow's Reichstag election.

Before coming from the great Krupp munitions works at Essen to deliver his final address in Cologne, Hitler conferred with Joachim Von Ribbentrop, his ambassador-at-large, who returned yesterday from the London negotiations over the Rhineland crisis.

Von Ribbentrop brought Der Fuehrer the latest information concerning the swift succession of London events which saw the League of Nations council condemn Germany's treaty breach, and the other Locarno powers advance proposals for a settlement.

Informed sources believed, however, that Der Fuehrer, having rejected the Locarno proposals and promising to make counter-proposals of his own next week, would not give Germany any indication of what it was to face until after the election.

It would be taken for granted, these sources said, that Hitler would "push the matter" after tomorrow's voting gave him—as Nazi officials were sure it would—a greater majority than ever.

The number of Germans entitled to vote tomorrow, more than 42,000,000 in the past, remained at its old level, although Jews for the first time, must refrain from balloting.

Air Police Patrol Rhineland Frontier

Paris, March 28 (AP)—A wide region of France's eastern frontier was closed by the air ministry today to all planes except military craft on official trips.

The ministry announced that as a result of "aerial indiscretions" by foreign planes, watching posts had been set up on all frontiers, "especially along the Maginot line," the fortifications facing Germany's remilitarized Rhineland.

A special air police force was created to pursue any foreign planes crossing the border illegally, as a warning that aerial spying on fortifications would not be tolerated.

Only authorized planes may cross any part of France's borders, the ministry ruled, and these must follow designated channels.

The aerial policing system was established to enable swift planes to pursue and photograph suspected craft and to obtain proof for diplomatic protests.

Girl Finds Fire Sees Man Flee

Charges Wooer Entered Home

MISS ALICE D'ORTANO
Fires of Love Out, Too, She Says

Aroused from sleep this morning by a noise in the lower part of the house, Miss Alice D'Ortano, 20, of Liberty street, Everett, hurried down from her bedroom to discover the house afire and a man fleeing through a kitchen window.

As a result of the story she told the police, Richard G. Reeves, of Vernal street, Everett, 25, a friend and former Everett high school athlete, was arrested on a charge of breaking and entering in the night time. Later, in Malden court, he was held in $1000 bail by Judge Everett G. Davis, following a plea of not guilty. The case was continued to next Thursday.

The fire was confined to a closet with a loss of $250. It was extinguished by the local fire department.

Miss D'Ortano told police that she recognized Reeves as he went through the kitchen window.

"I have been engaged to Richard since New Year's, 1935, but this incident is the end," said Miss D'Orlano. "I will have nothing to do with him from now on.

"I may give up my employment and go to live with my married sister in New Jersey. I have been keeping company with him for three years, but I'm fed up on his stunts. This is the second time he has entered my home without invitation."

SLAYER IS GIVEN 10-YEAR TERM

Providence, March 28—Frank Sano, 28, of Blanche avenue, was sentenced to 10 years in state prison by Judge Philip E. Joslin in Superior Court today for manslaughter. Sano had pleaded nolo.

The charge had been changed from a second degree murder indictment on the recommendation of Assistant Attorney-General John P. Cooney. Counsel declared there was not sufficient evidence to convict Sano of second degree murder.

Sano was tried as a result of a shooting on Christmas eve at a party at 286 Hawkins street. Sano was alleged to have assaulted the party, had a few drinks, and to have shot Carmine Nardolilloo, 18, of Smithfield avenue, who died.

American Fined For French Flight

Strasbourg, France, March 28 (AP)—Henry J. White, European aviation manager for the Socony Vacuum Company, was fined 50 francs and costs today in police court on a charge of flying over French fortifications.

His plane, which had been held by officials, was returned to him and he took off for London after paying the fine.

'I'll Come Back Strong In Politics,' Says Roche

Now that it's all over, ex-Mayor James A. Roche of Everett is glad the tax-collection difficulties, for which he stood trial, and was acquitted, were placed before a jury, he declared today. He added:

"The whole thing was politics. As a matter of fact, my defeat for re-election last fall was almost entirely due to this pending trial.

"But now that it has been cleared up before the judge, the jury and the public, and I have been vindicated, I shall come back stronger than ever.

"I want to thank the press for the fair handling the case was given."

While Roche and former Tax Collector George L. Woods were receiving the congratulations of their friends on their acquittal, Harold J. Gibson, 28, was awaiting sentence April 6.

Early in the trial in Middlesex superior court, East Cambridge, Gibson pleaded guilty to stealing $3500 in Everett tax receipts, but insisted Roche and Woods split up the money between them.

It was largely on his testimony after turning state's evidence that the Commonwealth based its case against Roche and Woods.

New York, March 28 (INS)—Step up and meet former Mayor and Mrs. James J. Walker, the proudest parents in New York city.

The new arrival is Mary Ann Walker, a five-weeks-old bundle of joy, blue-eyed and curly-haired and bubbling with excellent health and a genial disposition.

She spent the day in her blue decorated nursery in the former mayor's apartment home after her arrival, under the greatest of care, from The Cradle, Evanston, Ill., home for babies.

Mary Ann will be a skyline baby. She is to be raised in the terraced penthouse atop the tall apartment building where her foster mother and dad live.

Slugger Hunted In Street Attack

Boston police are searching for a man who slugged Nathan Sidel, 53, of Quincy street, Roxbury, over the head today while he was waiting for a street car at the junction of Blue Hill avenue and Intervale street. Sidel was removed to Boston City Hospital for treatment. Police link the attack to strike trouble.

SOVIET MASSES ARMIES ALONG MONGOL LINE

Tokyo, March 28 (INS)—War-like conditions prevailed today on the Korean-Siberian frontier, where Soviet troops are being concentrated, according to Japanese advices from Keijo.

Dispatch of several troop trains with Japanese reinforcements is being held up only while officers sent by Lieutenant-General Kuniaki Koiso, military commander of Korea, investigate the situation.

The foreign office confirmed reports that more Soviet troops are being sent to that area, where three Japanese were killed and 12 wounded in a pitched fight.

Russian war vessels are also being stationed in Possiet Bay, near the southernmost extremity of the Pacific coast of Siberia, dispatches said.

Machine gun nests are hurriedly being built, and every night the border zone is lit up with the war-like flare of Very lights.

Mongol-Soviet War Pact Approved; Armies Mass

Moscow, March 28 (AP)—The Outer Mongolian Republic proclaimed its approval of a mutual assistance agreement with the Soviet Union today, just after Soviet advices said three Japanese invaders were killed in renewed fighting on the far eastern frontiers.

Under terms of the virtual military alliance, Russia's huge army would go to Mongolia's aid in the event threats of a far eastern invasion, attributed to the Japanese, were fulfilled.

Japanese forces were reported in Soviet press advises to have been concentrating near the Nor'in Lake sector of the boundary between Outer Mongolia and the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchoukuo, leading to a Soviet belief that further border raids were likely.

The Soviet's mighty army of more than one million men was not expected to be called upon for protection by the Outer Mongolian republic, however, unless a major invasion were launched.

The small Hural, or peoples' assembly, of Outer Mongolia approved the mutual assistance pact last night, and concluded its sessions with authorization for an increase in the size and equipment of the Mongol army.

SELASSIE'S AIM DOWNS PLANE

London, March 28 (INS)—Emperor Haile Selassie's marksmanship is believed to have destroyed an Italian war plane in the Northern Ethiopian front, according to a communique issued at Addis Ababa, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch stated tonight.

According to the communique, the dispatch said, more than 4000 Italian bombs were dropped on Quoram today in an attempt to kill the Emperor.

It added, two Italian planes were shot down in the Lake Ashangi region, and that Emperor Haile Selassie himself is believed to have been responsible for bringing down one of them.

Crews of both planes were killed, Exchange Telegraph reported, when the machines caught fire in mid-air.

On frequent occasions when Italian planes bombed Dessye or other points on the northern front, Emperor Haile Selassie has reportedly rushed to a machine or anti-aircraft gun and blazed away at the planes.

The circulars said the Klan had controlled Tampa politics and officialdom for years and was responsible for the flogging of three men there, one of whom died.

The Klan closed a state-wide meeting here today. It staged a parade of several hundred hooded and robed marchers last night. Officials of the organization have several times denied any connection with the Tampa flogging cases.

Party Slates Complete

Landon Backed By Young G.O.P.

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

With time for withdrawals passed, slates of candidates for district delegates to the Republican national convention, publicly on record in favor of Governor Alf Landon of Kansas, were today standing pat in several sections of the state where the so-called Richardson slates, with undisclosed preference for a presidential candidate, are running.

Only six of the big list of Republican delegate and alternate candidates stepped out of the field.

John Richardson

These were David Thompson of Boston, alternate, in the 12th district; Ralph N. Hamilton of Cambridge and Charles L. Hardy of Newton, in the 9th district; Annie Corsano of Boston, alternate, Melvin R Taymore, Chelsea, and Julius Meyer of Boston, delegates, in the 12th district.

Con fer en ces looking to the elimination of opposition slates within the Republican ranks failed to bring about any material changes.

The battle now assured in the 13th district, above all others, will from now until the primary on April 28, attract the interest of the rank and file of the party.

HEDGES BACKS LANDON

Here, National Committeeman John Richardson of Canton is being challenged by a group of popular leaders in the younger wing of the G. O. P.

Richardson, running with George L. Barnes of Weymouth, is being opposed by Representative Charles W. Hedges of Quincy and Clerk of Courts George C. P. Olsson of Brockton.

In contrast to the Republican situation, 28 candidates for delegate and delegate at large changed their minds before the final gong for withdrawals was sounded.

Principal interest in these withdrawals centered in 10th, 11th and 12th districts, where opposition candidates had filed with the intention of trying to break through on the slates officially authorized to carry the designation "pledged to Roosevelt."

WITHDRAWALS PROMPTED

Some of the withdrawals were undoubtedly prompted through the receipt of a telegram alleged to have been sent out from the "State House" and bearing the last name of an employe of the secretary of state's office, in which the candidate was informed that he would not be allowed to be identified with the President's name on the ballot.

The use of the name similar to that of the state employe as well as the obvious intention to make it appear as an official state warning may lead to an investigation.

Withdrawal of delegate opposition in the 10th district is not considered as final as a substitute slate is expected to be filed before next Tuesday, the final date for filling vacancies caused by withdrawals. It is expected that School Committeeman Maurice Tobin of Boston will substitute a new slate in which he will have a place.

The regularly endorsed slate in this district is composed of State Ballot Law Commissioner Charles H. McGlue and former State Senator John Englert.

WITHDRAWALS LISTED

The complete list of withdrawals among the delegate and alternate delegate candidates for the Democratic National Convention, follows: 1st District, Fred W. Smith, Adams, delegate; 8th District, Daniel O'Dea and Patrick J. Meehan, alternates, and Emma Y. Slaughter and Joseph P. Monahan, alternates, all of Lowell.

Sixth district—Richard B. Larkin of Georgetown, delegate; John C. Stevens of Marblehead, alternate; Lot F. Mallamara of Haverhill.

Ninth district—G. Coward Bradley, Somerville, delegate.

Eleventh district—Henry Selvitella and Felix A. Marcella, delegates, William J. Flaherty, delegate; Joseph Rosenberg, delegate; Mary S. Colbert, delegate, Boston.

Twelfth district—Thomas H. Coleman, delegate; John J. Gallagher, alternate; Charles T. Brooks, delegate; Edward J. Mulligan, alternate; John L. Sheahan, alternate; William Carmill, alternate; John L. Sheahan, alternate; Robert E. Bigney, delegate; Mary E. McDonough, delegate, all of Boston.

Special Service

Passion week services will begin tomorrow in all of the Catholic churches in the Boston diocese. A feature of the services will be a course of lectures on the church and her doctrines at the Cathedral.

POLICE CHIEF'S OUSTER SOUGHT

Providence, March 28—Mayor John A. O'Brien and City Council President Robert McAllister of Warwick today conferred in the office of Governor Theodore F. Green with Executive Secretary Edward J. Higgins, in an effort to bring about the suspension or removal of Chief of Police Henry J. Ledoux of Warwick.

Today's conference resulted from a fine of $10 imposed last Thursday by Judge Patrick S. Barry in Warwick court on Merrill S. Gleason, for leaving the scene of a fatal accident last November. Eli Moulton, 11, Boy Scout, died from injuries received in the accident.

The resignation of Judge Barry has been accepted by Governor Green and will become effective April 20.

The resignation of Charles A. Hart, an ABC inspector who was found not guilty of drunken driving at the same session of court by Judge Barry, last Thursday, also was accepted today.

Judge Barry said today that he imposed a light fine on Gleason because of the report of City Solicitor Joseph W. Grimes. He said Grimes misrepresented the facts to him. He added that Warwick police inspectors corroborated Grimes' statements.

Attorney-General John P. Hartigan said today he had summoned Chief Ledoux to his office to give him all the facts in the killing of young Moulton.

Grand jury action was forecast as the result of today's developments.

B. & O. READY TO CUT FARES

Baltimore, March 28 (AP)—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will not join other lines of the east in seeking postponement of the flat two-cents-a-mile passenger fare, but will proceed to put the new rate into effect "not later than June 2," Daniel L. Willard, president, said today.

After a meeting in Washington yesterday, presidents of major eastern lines issued a statement saying they would ask delay in the June 2 effective date of an ICC order reducing basic coach fares from 3.6 to 2 cents a mile and eliminating the Pullman surcharge.

Willard attended the meeting, and it was at first assumed that he had agreed with the other eastern lines to seek a delay. Today's announcement reveals that the B. & O. has split with other eastern railroads.

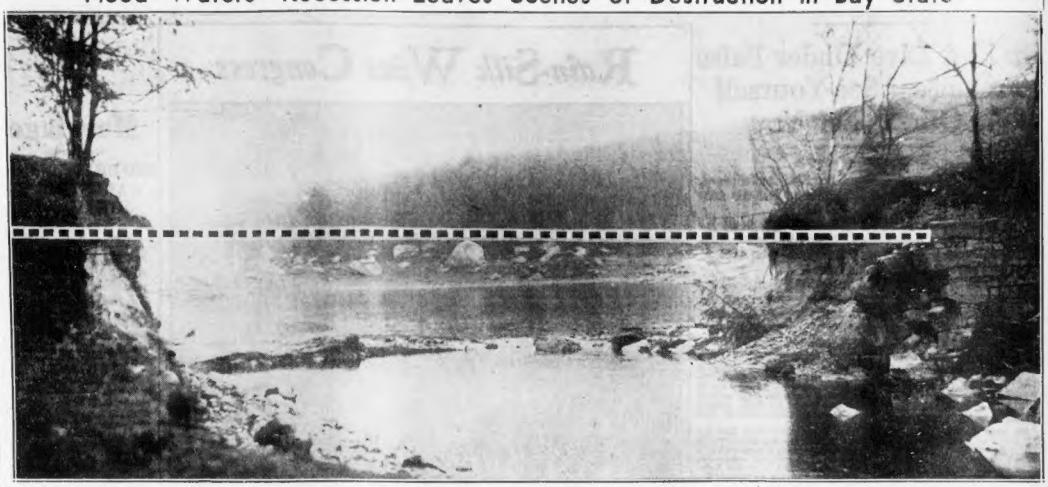
Flood Waters' Recession Leaves Scenes of Destruction in Bay State



TURBULENT WATERS from Manchaug pond proved to be too much of a strain for this dam in East Douglas. Dotted line indicates the height of the dam before it broke loose, sending tons of swirling water down on the already flood-stricken area. The picture gives one a vivid impression of the terrific force of roaring flood waters.

TAG DAY YIELDS FLOOD FUNDS

Today was "Tag Day" in Boston and throughout the State as emergency funds were raised for the victims of the flood.

An army of 10,000 volunteer workers, including members of veterans organizations, Boy and Girl Scouts, and others, worked diligently in practically every city and town, selling the flood relief tags.

Every cent raised from the sale of the tags will be turned over to the Red Cross and other relief agencies.

Walter V. McCarthy, state public welfare commissioner, in charge of the drive, reported early returns as being excellent.

The clearing weather today, bringing with it brilliant sunshine, served to allay, somewhat, the fears of relief leaders that the rivers would again get out of control.

In order to aid the Red Cross campaign for funds, the Massachusetts Horticultural Society announced that the Spring Flower Show at Mechanics Building would remain open tomorrow, with all admissions donated to relief work.

A concert will be given this evening by the members of the WPA music project at Longwood Towers, Brookline, for flood relief, according to Louis J. Cornell, who will direct the program.

Among the many volunteer "Tag Day" workers, who offered their services to aid flood victims, were these girls from St. Mary's crack Bugle and Drum Corps. Their cheerful smiles aided in the sale of many a tag during the day.

Two Flood Bridges To Be Rebuilt

Reconstruction of the two steel bridges between Northampton and Hadley and Holyoke and South Hadley across the Connecticut river, which were destroyed by the recent floods, will start probably Wednesday.

Governor Curley was informed today by State Public Works Commissioner William F. Callahan. A temporary wooden structure will be constructed between Sunderland and South Deerfield and a concrete pier with a steel drop at Turner's Falls.

The governor instructed the state housing board to get in touch with Red Cross authorities and report to him whether that organization is to replace 600 homes swept away by the flood. Red Cross officials had already indicated to him they would do necessary repairs.

Tune Slowly for Europe

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Do You Live Under False Pretenses? See Yourself As Others See You

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Vanity" is the most hateful word in the dictionary. In it, ninety per cent of the sins of the world are concentrated.

The husband who drinks to excess and vents his alcoholic anger on his helpless wife and children is without exception a peanut-minded individual who tries to drown his apparent inferiority in liquor.

The girl who seeks to lure a married man from his home is almost always a victim of vanity. Deep down in her heart she knows she lacks either the brains or beauty to attract the kind of man she wants. So she seeks revenge in love piracy and husband robbery.

If everyone would for one day endeavor to see himself as others see him, the world would be brought nearer to the ideals of the Creator than at any time in its existence.

But few of us have the courage TO DARE to see ourselves. We prefer to continue living under false pretenses. The weak, little man can't understand why he was denied the physical prowess of a Tunney or a Dempsey. The ugly woman refuses to face the fact that no matter how hard she tries, she can never possess the charms of a film actress. And, fighting reality, both men and women persist in acting roles that reduce them to silly puppets on the stage of life.

Today's $5 five-dollar prize goes to a woman who lives in Greater Boston. Here is a familiar problem. She writes:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 27 years of age, married and have four lovely children. When my husband drinks he becomes a madman. He squanders every cent he earns and runs heavily into debt.

What is worse, he encourages the children to be disrespectful and abusive to me. They are not to blame, of course, for half of the time they really do not know what they are saying.

No matter what I do, my husband is sure to find fault. Nothing is right. Everything is wrong.

Honestly, Miss Fairfax, I cannot stand it any longer. My hair is turning gray. My nerves are shattered. And I shall be in a hospital unless a miracle happens.

Please give me your advice.

MRS. C.

MY DEAR FRIEND:

My advice is to encourage your husband to see himself as you and others see him. If he can only be made to do this, he will be so ashamed that he will want to move to a strange city where he can begin life anew.

If others did one-half the things to us we do to ourselves, we'd step at nothing short of murder.

The truth is, dear friend, that your husband is one of the peanut-minded individuals I have briefly described. He is trying to act a part for which he is neither mentally nor physically fitted. Let him wake up before it is too late. Without a doubt, the "boys" on whom he is spending his money so lavishly are laughing behind his back and calling him names that we don't use in this column.

No law of church or state compels you to live with a man whose conduct is preparing you for the undertaker. You've got every right in the world to tell him you will pack up your things and leave him the very next time he returns home intoxicated.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

The five-dollar award for the best letter of the week goes to a small town in Central Massachusetts. The writer is a girl of 17, whose problem is one that faces most young women. She says:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

You see, I'm just at the age when I can't seem to cope with reality. "Don't tell me life is like that!" I say. It's the feeling you have when you argue with the smart, little six-year-old next door, who has told you disdainfully that there is no Santa Claus.

Until recently, I was a happy, carefree girl, fortunate in that young men who had taken me to parties and dances were perfect gentlemen. Of course, I'd used discretion and associated only with those who weren't questionable.

Then, my mother and others began telling me I couldn't count on my previous experiences. They said even the most respectable man is out for his own ends, regardless of how good and pure the girl happens to be.

It may sound foolish, Miss Fairfax, but all the advice I have received has tended to destroy my dreams and to make me afraid. Now every time I go out with a man I'm half afraid he'll try to take unfair advantages.

I'm a good girl, and good I want to stay. I don't indulge in cigarettes, alcohol, and profanity. And I do not go in for petting.

Would you please write me and tell me how a girl can enjoy the company of men without being compromised?

MOLLY.

DEAR MOLLY:

You are borrowing trouble. And, believe me, you are certain to be an old maid if you begin to distrust all men.

The truth is not two men in a hundred ever think of taking unfair advantages when they are in the company of girls. My experience has taught me most young men today are clean, honest and strong morally.

This may shock you, Molly. But it is none the less true. When a fellow does stoop to immorality, he usually has plenty of company from the girl. I do not believe in condemning all men and praising all women. There are just as many bad girls as there are bad boys.

The young woman who avoids heavy drinking and habitual petting will seldom get into trouble. Usually the man will be the kind of man the girl he loves wants him to be.

And remember, Molly, everything depends on how you act when you accompany a boy on the first "date." You can be attractive or repulsive. It is all up to you.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Covering Honors

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The question of when, and when not to cover an honor is, to most players, one of the most perplexing in contract.

What they fail to realize is that there is more than mere promotion involved; there is also the vital factor of timing. This is perfectly illustrated in the hand discussed today.

West, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
♡	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

North decided that the chance of taking many spade tricks was exceedingly small, since he had no possible card of entry. So he wasted no time on a lost cause. Instead, he made the shrewd lead of the eight of hearts, hoping to strike a heart suit in partner's hand. Dummy played the Jack to the first trick and South had to consider the situation.

It was perfectly obvious from West's bidding and the wealth of honor cards exposed in the dummy, that North must be either completely or very heavily devoid of entry cards or stoppers. He, South, however, had both diamonds and clubs stopped and there was a good chance that he would twice gain the lead.

The Rule of Eleven proved that North's heart opening had been "phoney" since five higher cards were in sight. If South were to cover the heart Jack, on gaining the lead in clubs or spades, he would have to lead up to dummy's remaining Q-9.

But if he ducked and declarer had only one guard to his Ace, the second heart lead would establish South's suit. On this correct analysis, South played low to the first heart lead.

His judgment was well rewarded. Declarer first knocked out the diamond Ace but the heart return drove out his now unguarded Ace. Later declarer took the club finesse, which gave South the lead for his three good heart tricks.

West could have made his contract had he dreamed that South had only two spades. The method of play would have been to cash his diamond after he had established them, take in the Ace and King of spades, and then throw South in the lead by playing dummy's last heart.

After running his hearts South would have been forced to lead a club, giving West two club tricks and the contract. This line of play would have been double-dummyish.

Rain-Silk Wins Congress

MIRACULOUSLY, the brilliant plaid silk used in this raincoat and umbrella, one of the most glamorous of the rainy-day winners at the Fashion Congress session, is not rubberized. That means comfort on steamy days. It is waterproofed by a special process. Numerous enough to mention are its other virtues—it washes, and will not harden or peel. This, you might think, will probably put it in the miracle class as far as your budget is concerned. But no!

"Your Figure, Madame!"

STAND UP FOR YOUR FIGURE

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1936, King Features Synd., Inc.

IN figures combining the worst features of both overweight and underweight, it is necessary to build up the thin portions with calories and normalizing exercise, and at the same time to reduce the bulges by strengthening the muscles in the bulky portions.

Inactivity pyramids the figure and, as a result, the average figure grows to waist and hips. When the excess weight goes all in one direction, and particularly when it is all below the waist, exercise will accomplish more than dieting.

In fact, exercise will improve the figure in all departments by giving better weight distribution.

Diet must, of course, be given consideration, but in a case of this kind, it takes second place. When the upper part of the body is thin, the calorie allowance must be fairly high—between 1200 and 1500 per day. The menu must be well balanced and health-building, for the development of the bust is furthered by all factors that promote health.

Keep fit by following the general exercises to keep you trim and fit as a fiddle. These may be obtained by sending your request along with a stamped self-addressed envelope to Ida Jean Kain, Boston Evening American.

Wholesome Diet

The diet should be composed largely of fresh fruits and vegetables, salads, an egg, or a serving of cottage cheese, a pint of whole milk daily, a serving of lean meat, and some whole grains. In other words, the diet should be wholesome and adequate, but rich, heavy foods should be avoided.

Fresh air, sunshine and sufficient sleep should all be incorporated in your beauty program. The individual with a thin, flat chest should wake up the muscles and create a demand for oxygen with stretching exercises before an open window each morning.

Limber Up

Correct posture is especially beneficial in the improvement of bust contour and in filling out the chest. Hold the chest up, not out, and hold the head up and the chin in. Stand up correctly for your figure.

You might think that, with a pyramid figure, hip exercises are all you need. But that is not true. It is important to stimulate the circulation and develop other portions of the body as the hips are reduced.

In your exercise program, limber up with the General Set to Keep You Trim and Fit as a Fiddle.

Given In Marriage

DID BRIXTON HIRE GANGSTERS TO STEAL 'BOX'?

CHAPTER 809

WE rested without speaking for the seven minutes Lillian had estimated as the time which the tired Bob would consume in getting to sleep.

Then she explained what she meant by "making a noise like a nagging wife."

"The one thing we mustn't do is to arouse Sam Brixton's suspicions that we've been away from the farm house," she said. "I'm supposed to have put you to bed, so you must go into your own room, that he may not get a glimpse of you going through the hall. But if you'll leave your door ajar and station yourself behind it, you can hear me staging a nagging party for Harry upon the subject of playing cards all night that will curl your back hair and break up the card party. Incidentally, I'm going to wake Helena on the way down. It's a shame, for she won't go to sleep again, but that will tie Sam down to their room, and that's what we want.

SURE OF BRIXTON'S GUILT

"You see," she went on, "I don't want him to get a hint of this adventure, or of the fact that we have the box safe until the box opening tomorrow morning. I want to spring it on him all at once, together with the fact that Ronald escaped death only by the fraction of an inch at the hands of one of his gangsters."

"His gangsters?" I stressed the pronoun.

"Oh! I know I have no real proof," she said, "but if Sam Brixton isn't flabbergasted when that lock box turns up safe and sound tomorrow, I'll miss my guess, and I've guessed right several times in my short young life."

"I'll not bet against you on that score," I said, and then Lillian slipped her hand under my elbow.

"Let's slip down to your room," she said, "and then I'll be on my way."

She closed the door and went on down the stairs, and flung wide the living room door without knocking.

"What is this, anyway?" she demanded, and I knew that her arms were akimbo, in her burlesqued fish-wife attitude. "An all night gambling joint? Haven't any of you any beds that you can crawl into?"

"For the love of Michael, Lil!" Dicky played up admirably, "can't you let a good game alone. Run along and go to sleep if you crave slumber, but let the rest of us alone."

BRIXTON ANNOYED

Sam Brixton's raucous voice broke into the colloquy.

"You mentioned Helena a name. Is she awake?"

"Of course she's awake, and wondering where in the world you are. That is, she was wondering. She isn't any more. I told her."

"You would," Samuel Brixton growled in disgusted tones. "I'll bet you woke her up, too."

"But I didn't mean to," Lillian said blithely. "I was sure I heard her say 'Come in' when I knocked. But, as I walked over when I came in, and then, of course, I told her where you were, and she said to tell you not to wait for a shave, a haircut or lunch before you got yourself upstairs. I didn't know Helena could be so waxy. She sounded like me when I've a nagging fit on."

"All right, Lil, you win," Dicky said, resignedly, and I heard the sound of cards slapped down upon the table. "Nobody could know whether he held aces or deuces with you jabbering. I'm going to bed. What do the rest of you say?"

GLORIOUS DISHES IN THE SOUTHERN TRADITION

Universal Appeal of Creole Cooking

By MARTHA LEE

WE have received a cookbook and been advised to "learn to cook Southern" by James Reardon, Editor of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, who has returned from a long stay in the South.

He's a bit of a connoisseur himself when it comes to handling the skillet, but his specialties are good old New England fish chowder, clam-bakes and stews.

And all this enthusiasm on his part is just proof that none of us can resist the appeal and charm of this cooking that is different from our own.

None can deny the romance of southern cookery for the very name conjures the picture of lavish hospitality in beautiful old homes with Southern mammies whisking together perfectly seasoned foods.

In New Orleans it is Creole cookery with the frequent use of red and green peppers, onion and garlic; Virginia serves sugar cured hams and hot breads, Maryland offers delicately fried chicken and its many unusual seafood recipes, and Kentucky its famous pollikker and corn bread.

The pollikker can be made from any vegetable water in which salt pork is cooked, but most Southerners like water in which turnip greens have been cooked.

SOUTHERN PECAN PIE

1½ cups sugar
½ cup corn syrup
¼ cup butter
3 eggs, beaten
1 cup pecans

Combine sugar, corn syrup and butter and bring to a boil. Beat eggs and add nuts. Add hot syrup gradually. Cool. Roll dough and line nine-inch pie pan with pastry. Pour cooled filling into unbaked pie shell and bake in moderately hot oven (375 deg. F.) 30 minutes; or until knife inserted comes out clean. Makes filling for one nine-inch pie or 12 tarts.

CREOLE GOULASH

2 cans red kidney beans
½ pound sliced bacon
1 quart can tomatoes
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ lb. cheese
Salt and pepper

Cook the bacon crisply, then lift it from the pan. Add the kidney beans to bacon fat. Then tomatoes to which baking powder has been added. Stir all together. Season to taste with salt and pepper, put in casserole. Cover closely, set in moderate oven and cook slowly for one hour. Then remove the cover and sprinkle with grated cheese, arrange the bacon strips over all and cook for 10 minutes longer. Serve in the casserole.

CORN MEAL DODGERS WITH MAPLE SYRUP

1½ cups corn meal
4½ cups water
¾ cup sifted flour
3 eggs

Heat in a saucepan the water and corn meal. When this has thickened slightly remove from the fire and add the flour. Beat the eggs into this. Fry this batter in a mixture of bacon fat and butter, using one tablespoon to the cake. Brown on both sides. Serve with maple syrup.

Coquetry in Love

SHE'S CHARMING AS SWEETHEART, WIFE

WHAT is to be said for the coquette? Nothing, if she's merely a heartless little fraud in the game of love. A great deal, if her coquetry is a graceful, winsome way of playing at this game!

The clever coquette never appears to know as much as a man about any subject which is his specialty, whether it's automobiles, sports, bookkeeping, or even making coffee.

She will appear strong in feminines, womanly matters; weak and helpless when it's time to let the man feel important and superior.

The refreshing quality of coquetry is carried over from courtship days through married life by the clever woman. The girl that we see in the sketch—before she is, as she looked with half-teasing eyes at her sweetheart in 1926, and as the happy wife of today. Still lively, still steering clear of the humdrum, still not taking her husband's interest for granted but keeping the sparkle of romance alive by a bit of coquetry.

There is an art in this most delicate of all human relations which it well repays women to learn. The popular girl, the happy wife, has taken a few bright notes on what men seem to prefer in women. Do they really prefer "dumb Doras"? Is the clinging vine out of date?

It is important for girls to know whether office work, side by side with men, destroys romance or promotes it. It is important for the wife to know what are the little things, daily neglected or daily observed, that keep the family together or send it drifting on to a wreck.

Love is too complicated to be entirely without its problems. Don't trust merely to guesswork, to the idle chatter of inexperienced friends.

Seek the advice of some one who has studied thousands of cases like your own, a trained psychologist and physician who sees life from many angles.

Our 40-page illustrated Home Institute booklet, SUCCESS IN LOVE AND MARRIAGE, offers this sound help to the troubled. Don't be timid and shy. Learn what science can teach you.

Elisabeth West to Be Bride Of Frederic Clay Bartlett, Jr.

By BETTY ALDEN

THE HASTY PUDDING CLUB is certainly holding its place in the social spotlight . . . All this week the club's musical show has shared honors with the opera, and the flower show, yesterday the engagement of a prominent Pudding member was announced, and today comes news of the engagement of another member of the century-old social club . . . Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Halley West of Dorset, Vermont, are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Elisabeth West, to Frederic Clay Bartlett, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Clay Bartlett who spend the summer at Tree Tops, their estate in Beverly Cove, and the winter at Bonnet House, in Fort Lauderdale, Florida . . .

MRS. HAROLD D. WALKER

Miss West studied at the Burr and Burton Seminary . . . Mr. Bartlett prepared for college at the Lake Placid School and was graduated from Harvard with the class of '29 . . . While at Harvard he was a member of the Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770, the Instrumental Clubs, the Iroquois Club, and was manager of the soccer squad . . . He later attended the Architectural School of Armour Institute in Chicago, and is now engaged in business in that city . . . He is a member of the Scarab Society of Architects, the Racquet Club, the Cycle Club, the Saddle and Bridle, the Arts, and the University Club of Chicago . . .

• • •

If the invitations to the First Annual Modern Arts Ball are to be judged as a sample, their recipients will have some novel and amusing experiences at the affair which is to be held at the Copley-Plaza on Friday evening, April 17 . . . The invitations, which are as large as two income tax blanks stuck together, are profusely illuminated with a jumble of spritely, modernistic sketches done by Gardner Cox . . . These run all the way from a freckle-faced sun, to a caricature of Vincent Van Gogh standing in a plie of potatoes and carrots which wear the most complacent expressions . . . Opposite the sun, the shade of old Gilbert Stuart, conventional portraitist of Colonial days, shakes an irate fist at all this free style modernism . . . Below him the State House and several other Boston buildings haphazardly imitate the Tower of Pisa and several codfish attest their relationship to the porpoise by hopping in and out of the blue waters of Massachusetts bay . . .

In the group which has been busily scribbling names on invitations for the past few days are, Mrs. James R. Carter, 2d, Miss Frances Gardiner, Miss Eileen Nolan, Mrs. Frederick Bruce Robinson, Miss Peggy Turner, Mrs. Harold D. Walker, Mrs. Francis Wright and Miss Mary Wright . . .

Novelties Planned for Program

MRS. ROBERT HILLYER and her committee planning the ball have decided to have, in addition to fanciful decorations, an auction of paintings, two exhibits from the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, films of the exotic Theda Bara, and two-gun Bill Hart, made when the movies were "Jerkies"; and of course, dancing and a buffet supper . . . Working with Mrs. Hillyer are Mrs. William Brace Pratt, Mrs. Frances W. MacVeagh, Mrs. Nathaniel Saltonstall, Frederick R. Robinson of the Fogg Museum, Gardner Cox, Charles Kuhn of the Germanic Museum, Charles C. Cunningham of the Museum of Fine Arts, John A. Barry and Herbert B. Lutz who has charge of the decorations . . .

Speaking of events in the world of art, Mrs. John J. Gleason has secured a very interesting and unusual exhibition to open next week in the gallery of the Junior League house, at Zero Marlborough street . . . The brilliant "paintings in wool" of Marian Stoll will be a distinct change from the black and whites of the Cheney exhibition of engravings, closing today . . . Mrs. Stoll's pictures are created entirely from colored wool which is blended so expertly and adroitly that, from a slight distance, they give the effect of water colors . . .

• • •

The ever active ladies of the Christopher Shop are already laying plans for their annual benefit Pop Concert . . . So far they have settled upon May 7 as the date for this year's affair, and George Gershwin will be the guest artist . . .

Weston Folk Will Attend

WE HAVE ALL SEEN plenty of movies but it is quite a special occasion when the members of the audience are there to see themselves on the screen . . . Many of those who helped to make "Four Neighbors," the new movie of the Judge Baker Guidance Center, are planning dinner parties for Saturday, April 4 . . . That evening the film will have its premiere showing in the Weston Town Hall and everyone will be on hand to see whether he could consider himself a serious rival to Charles Laughton or Richard Dix . . . We should have said both "he" and "she" for it will be no masculine monopoly, with plenty of expectant Garbos and Hepburns . . .

Mrs. Kenneth Billings, whose husband is one of the stars of the picture, will give a large dinner party at her home on Post road . . . Among her guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Roland M. Baker, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Alan Bemis, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Dumaine, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Parson, Mr. and Mrs. Manlius Sargent, Mr. and Mrs. George Sturgis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thayer, Mr. B. Loring Young and Mr. and Mrs. John Wright . . . Mrs. Henry W. Patterson and her husband, who plays a pathetic character named Tim O'Hara, will dine with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winsor, Jr. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ames, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Magruder and Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mickles of Weston will be the guests of Mrs. J. Langdon Sullivan . . .

Even the boys and girls from the North Bennet Street Industrial School, who acted in the settlement dance and the crap-shooting scenes, will have a chance to admire their own work, for special busses will take them out to Weston . . .

SYNOPSIS

On the train, en route to her home in Los Angeles from college, lovely Elizabeth Harmon meets handsome Gerald Bruton, young stock broker. At luncheon, when Elizabeth compares college to prison, a hard look creeps into Gerald's face, and, later, when a man approaches their table and exclaims, "I never expected to see you in this part of the world," he turns white.

At home, Elizabeth's step-father, Colonel James McCarthy, forbids her to go out with Gerald, so she arranges to meet him clandestinely. Over champagne, at the swanky Miramar, Gerald tells Elizabeth of his love for her. She is deliriously happy and, gazing at the stars, waxes poetical. Had she looked at Gerald at that instant, she would have seen a queer, strained look in his face.

Their tete-a-tete is interrupted by the sudden appearance of two friends of Elizabeth, Nancy and Jasper, who are celebrating their engagement. The four young people elope to Yuma, Arizona, where a double wedding is performed.

After the ceremony, Gerald refuses to pose for the news photographers. He and Elizabeth slip out a side door. Gerald is in favor of driving straight through to Tia Juana, but Elizabeth is too tired, so they stop at San Diego where Gerald suggests that she take a single room in her own name in order to keep their marriage secret until they cross the border.

While Elizabeth is registering, a woman approaches Bruton and exclaims, "Why, Gerald, I'd no idea you were in California. Have you brought your wife along? Or is Mrs. Bruton in Chicago?"

CHAPTER VI

The room clerk had given Elizabeth her key. From her stiff fingers it clattered to the desk. She picked it up.

A wife? Was the woman crazy? A wife in Chicago? Mrs. Bruton? Gerald?

The room clerk signalled a bellboy to show her to her room, giving him the number. With an effort she summoned her strength to get to the elevator.

To the left, miss. Down the passage." The bellboy stared at the pale beautiful girl with the strange look on her face. He decided she had been drinking. That would account for it.

He unlocked the door with his pass-key, throwing it open. She stepped in quickly, slamming the door in his face, and forgetting even a "thank you." He could hear the key snap in the lock. He whistled softly. Some party!

Inside the cool, quiet room, Elizabeth had just strength enough to get to the bed. She lay across it helplessly. The walls were leaping up and down, the bed shaking violently.

She lay there for a few minutes, everything whirling.

Then sharp nausea assailed her. Her physical distress was so intense that for a while it blotted out the mental.

The paroxysm stopped. She lifted her head, saw her face deathly white in the mirror above the wash basin.

She sat down on the edge of the bath, her head in her two hands. Gradually it began to clear a little.

If what the woman said were true . . .

It couldn't be! Gerald would never be such a scoundrel!

Was It True?

She racked her brains to remember all their talk last night and the previous night. It eluded her. It had been a mad medley of love making to the accompaniment of music and loads of champagne, and spring glamour, and moonlight on the ocean.

In the plane whirling over the eerie desert that lay whitely below them, Gerald had held her hand . . . but she could hardly hear what he said to her over the roar of the twin motors.

They had drunk champagne in the sky. It had made her mad for him, utterly reckless. Nothing in the world had counted but himself and her, and the electrifying knowledge that they were to be married immediately.

She remembered now, with a sickening sinking of the heart, his desire to get away from Yuma, his dread of publicity. Why, he wouldn't even let her wait to say goodby to the other couple; nor had he wanted her to stop in San Diego, but get right on over the border into Mexico.

He had told her to register in her own name in this hotel.

Wasn't that confirming proof? Bigamy!

Scarlet flooded her cheeks. She trembled with shock and horror. Why didn't Gerald telephone her?

Because he knew she had heard. Because he was unable to face her.

Had he gone away? Ought she to escape now? But where on earth to go, with hardly any money in her pocketbook?

There must be an explanation! The thing to do was keep one's head . . . wait here for Gerald to call her.

He had compelled him to marry her. He must have cared for her. Hadn't his actions, from the moment of their romantic meeting on the train, clearly showed what he felt for her?

A devastating thought struck her. He had realized that she was not the kind who would ever give herself outside of marriage, so—for the joys of a brief honeymoon—he had flung a sop to convention, gone through a meaningless ceremony!

Her hands clenched. "I hate him!"

Then she broke down.

The storm of tears spent, she went over to the basin to get a glass of ice water.

The thing to do was to take a bath. She would feel better then, be able to come to some decision, perhaps.

The warm water relaxed her tired body. She lay there, almost comatose, her thoughts in suspension.

Someone had left a box of talcum on the window ledge. She dusted herself with the fragrant powder. A heavy bathrobe of Turkish toweling was on the towel rack. She slipped it on.

She splashed cold water on her face until her cheeks glowed. Then she applied powder and lipstick. The deep shadows round her eyes that had come from fatigue and anxiety gave depth to her beauty.

She started in alarm and her breath caught in her throat as someone rapped abruptly on the door of the bedroom.

"Elizabeth. It's I—Gerald. Open. I want to speak to you."

But a moment, her heart rapidly beating heart, hesitating.

The peremptory summons came again. Other people would hear him. If she wouldn't open, there would be a scandal in the hotel. Reluctantly, and scrubbing as she held the bathrobe tightly about her slender body, she unbolted the door to him.

"Don't Lie to Me!"

The vision that Gerald Bruton saw was so breath-takingly lovely that it went to his head like wine. Closing and bolting the door behind him, he made two strides towards Elizabeth and gathered her in his arms, bathrobe and all, kissing her passionately, straining her to him.

With all her strength she tried to throw him off, but she was powerless.

"Don't! Oh, don't!" she half sobbed.

"You dare to touch me!" she choked, dragging the robe about her. "You dare to come here!"

There was horror in her eyes. As she saw that look, passion subsided.

"Good lord! Aren't you my wife? What do you think I'm made of, Elizabeth?"

"Your wife! Why, you're married already! Don't you think I heard what that woman in the hotel said to you?" She laughed shrilly, hysterically.

"Elizabeth, be silent! I tell you you're mistaken. I'm married to no one but you. I have no other wife."

"But I heard her. A wife in Chicago, she said plainly. Don't lie to me, Gerald."

"I'm not lying, Elizabeth. I'm going to explain. For the Lord's sake, don't make a scene and have the whole hotel talking about our ears. Come, sit here with me." He tried to draw her towards him, but she shook him off as though his very touch were loathsome.

"Go on. Say what you have to say. I'll stand here."

The expression on his face was grim. He had thought her soft and yielding. Never guessed she could be such a termagant.

He said slowly: "It's really very simple. I was never married. I'm divorced now. You're legally my wife, Elizabeth."

"If that really is true, why didn't you tell me? Why did you leave me to find it out from strangers?"

"Because I happened to fall in love with you, and—fool that I was—I was afraid of the effect it might have on a young girl ignorant of the world. Don't you know that love makes cowards of the best of us, Elizabeth?"

Final Blotto Prize to Lynn

Louise Jackson, of 48 South Common street, Lynn, is responsible for the above pattern which won for her the first prize in the BLOTTO game's final day.

The time has come to say that the Boston Evening American BLOTTO contest has come to an end.

Thousands upon thousands of entries were sent into the BLOTTO editor, and everybody has had a lot of fun. Some were lucky enough to win prize.

BLOTTO became the current craze in New England. Like chopsticks are to the Chinese, like the samovar is to the Russians, like cheese is to the Swiss, like whalebubber is to the Eskimos, so has BLOTTO been to New Englanders.

As a matter of fact, the Boston baked-beans, Vermont maple-syrup, and Connecticut nutmegs have all had hardy competition from newcomer—BLOTTO.

As fitting farewell, the first prize for the last day goes to Louise Jackson, 48 South Common street, Lynn. She gets $10. Second prize of $5 is awarded to Max Lieberman, 85 Ballou road, Dorchester.

Ten $1 prizes go to the following: Mrs. Winifred Pierce, 20 Temple street, Boston. Geneva Doane, 100 School street, Everett. Mrs. E. Gliney, 32 Park avenue, Bridgewater. Elizabeth Parker, 22 Avon road, Watertown. Winifred M. Cook, 27 Rosemont street, Dorchester. Mrs. George Lund, 46 Davis avenue, Norwood. Ruth Leora Herpin, 33 Hamilton street, Wollaston. Helen Louise Mountain, 39 Irving street, Cambridge. Mrs. M. Perry, 46 Prospect street, Gloucester. Charles Gilfeather, 6 Holborn street, Roxbury.

'FIDELIO' ACCLAIMED

Opera Thrills Thronged House

The Metropolitan Opera Company last night gave Ludwig von Beethoven's "Fidelio" before an audience that completely filled the Grand Opera House despite weather that only the most ardent of opera fans would dare.

It was the third in the company's Germaa repertoire to be given here during its stay this week and was roundly acclaimed, enthusiasm running to high pitch at times.

This work, despite a poor reception at its first Vienna production in 1805, subsequent revisions by composer and librettist, entailing among other things the writing of four overtures, and most unhappy treatment from operatic impresarios for more than a century, has been Metropolitan stock fare for more than a decade.

Retention by the new Metropolitan director, Edward Johnson, augurs well for the future of the work, and it may yet attain some measure of popularity with opera audiences.

Mr. Johnson has graced Beethoven's only work for the stage with a magnificent cast and production, and this vocal and scenic excellence seemed last night to recompense to a great extent for the obvious musical and book defects, which, however, seem to grow less apparent with repetition and familiarity.

The cast, headed by Kirsten Flagstad as Leonora; Emanuel List, as the jailer; Friedrich Schorr as Don Pizarro, and Queena Mario as the jailer's daughter, was excellent in every respect.

Miss Flagstad, in the role of the wife who thwarts a plot on her husband's life by the governor of the prison, sang felicitously in this difficult role, and her reception was overwhelmingly enthusiastic at the hands of last night's audience.

List, a bass-baritone of exceptional warmth and depth, dominated the male portion of the cast, others of whom were Julius Huehn, Marek Windheim, Giordano Paltrinieri and Arnaold Gabor.

The orchestra, under the direction of Artur Bodanzky, was adequate. Mr. Bodanzky presented the original Fidelio overture to open the opera and the famous Leonora overture No. 3 between acts, which is the usual form.

DEADLINE IS SET IN '3'S' TEST

Not many hours remain for entries in the "Threes" contest sponsored by the Boston Evening American and inspired by the film "These Three" currently being screened at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

In the picture, Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea are co-starred.

The contest is for the purpose of coining three words which one might use in conversation, and which have not been originated in the past.

Old expressions, ones which have been in common use for many years, will not be considered in the judging, but a different combination of some of the old "Threes" might finish in the money.

Stanley D. Wallace, Jr., of 525 Washington street, Boston, sent in "Money, Moonshine and Madness," which the editor offers as an example of the idea of the contest.

An element of humor was injected into the contest by Mrs. Etta Griffin, of 220 Linden street, Pawtucket, R. I., who sent along a flip crack. She sent "Fair, Fat and Forty."

"Truth, Justice and Judgment" was the contribution of Thomas H. Lennon, of 334 Walden street, Cambridge, and Virginia Gray, of 1083 Washington street, Boston, wrote "Friendship, Love and Truth."

When the contest editor and his corps of assistants make their final choices, an award of $10 will be paid the one deemed best. A second prize of $5 will also be paid, the third and fourth will receive $2.50 each.

The next five best will be given $1 each, and for the next 25 there will be pairs of tickets to either Loew's State or Orpheum theaters.

Remember, your entries must be in this office before midnight, Monday, or must bear a post mark of not later than that hour.

Address your communications to the "These Three" Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

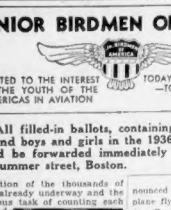
TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

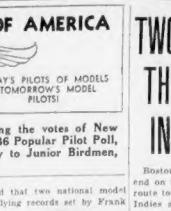
All filled-in ballots, containing the votes of New England boys and girls in the 1936 Popular Pilot Poll, should be forwarded immediately to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston.

Tabulation of the thousands of votes is already underway and the tremendous task of counting each vote and accrediting it will be made easier for Birdmen headquarters staff if the ballots are mailed as soon as they are filled.

About 10,000 votes have already been counted and show Hawks in holding a slight lead over Lindbergh, with Rickenbacker third and Amelia Earhart fourth in the Boston wing poll.



Eddie Rickenbacker



Frank A. Barrett, Jr.

Since hundreds of ballots are still out, squadron commanders, Boy Scouts, individual members and non-members are urged to send them in now. No useful purpose is served by holding them until the deadline on Tuesday if they are already filled.

National headquarters has announced that two national model plane flying records set by Frank A. Barrett, Jr., Brighton, and Torrey Cape Quincy, will stand as official. The records were set last week at the sixth indoor meet at South Armory.

Frank established a record of 4 min. 14.35 sec. for Baby R. O. W. models and Torrey set a mark of 4 min. 31.15 sec. for Baby hand-launched stick models.

Affidavits attesting to these records were sworn to by the Boston wing commander, notarized and forwarded to New York. Frank and Torrey will receive handsome certificates and have their names posted on the record board at New York, in addition to two of the three trophies donated by the RKO Boston theater for the series.

LEWIS HANEY ON TREND

Common Sense

NEEDED AS WHOLE NATION

Runs to Extremes

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, March 28—One way of explaining the great confusion, lack of balance, and uncertainty in thought today, is this: Most people are going to extremes. They go to one extreme, and some go to the other. This leaves too few of us in the middle to keep the balance and allow common sense to prevail.

For example, some of us seem to believe nothing. We have become cynics, accepting nothing as being true or good. On the other hand, many of us seem ready to believe anything, and accept any quack remedy that is proposed.

* * *

The man, Hauptmann, was duly tried and convicted of kidnaping and killing of the Lindbergh baby. The evidence was such that no unbiased mind could escape the conclusion. But, Hoffman wouldn't believe anything—judge, jury, experts, the physical facts of handwriting and lumber.

So we have the ridiculous spectacle of an egotist going over the whole case again all by himself! (If he can't believe others, how can he believe himself?)

Don't say, we find millions of people who cannot possibly know much about economics, or money, or banking, refusing to believe experts in those subjects. And on all hands we find people refusing to believe in past experience or history, and rejecting reasoning based thereon, with the remark, "Times are different."

* * *

At the other extreme, we find an even larger number of people who are willing to believe anything. (Such people first "believed" Hauptmann innocent, and then "believed" him guilty.)

Just for example, take the Townsend planners. They blindly chase after the economic notions of an old medicine man who knows nothing of economics. So we find a big political machine built up and supported by the contributions of the gullible. They subscribe to the Townsend Weekly with its pages full of ads of quack remedies for growing hair, rejuvenation, etc. They enable an army of "state managers" and other "workers" to draw fat salaries.

Here, too, come those who believe that anything will do for money, and that all we need is to issue promises to pay. (As individuals, we can't get away with giving our notes in lieu of payment, but they believe that as "society" we can do the same thing.)

* * *

The folly of all this is indicated by the fact that both of these two extremes comes to pretty much the same thing in practice.

If (1) you believe nothing, you have no belief. But if (2) you believe anything, you also have no belief of your own. Both kinds of extremists refuse to accept the truth of scientific laws and logical standards.

If (1) you believe that you know better than the experts, you are an egotist. But if (2) you believe those who are not experts (e. g., Townsend, Coughlin, and Douglas) you not only accept their egotism, but you are practically saying that you know better than the experts.

If (1) you do not believe that past experience is valid, you find yourself in the same boat with those (2) who do believe that any wild experiment is justified.

If (1) you do not believe that money is important or that it makes any difference what we use for money, then (2) you fall into the same errors as those who do believe that money is the cause of all our economic troubles, and who seek a cure by trying some unreal kind of currency.

PHILLIPS PETE EARNINGS UP IN 1935

By Louis J. O'Malley

Too often in selecting a particular company in an industry, we look to the three or four largest to show a major price appreciation, entirely overlooking some of the better prospects among the smaller companies. The oil industry is a good example of this. The Standard Oil group, Texas and Gulf are well known, but let us turn for a moment to Phillips Petroleum.

The policy of this company has been to geographically concentrate its operations and expand its present facilities, thereby increasing its reserves of raw products rather that to purchase additional oil properties. Phillips is perhaps the most completely integrated company in oil industry. It produces all its raw materials for every department and has a surplus for sale to the trade.

One of the outstanding assets of the company is the new polymerization process for refining the crude petroleum. Said process is the major development in the oil refining business in the last several years. To illustrate its value to Phillips, there are now approximately 12 of the latest refineries in this country using the process and paying royalties to the Polymerization Process Corp., which is wholly owned subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum. From information received from technical sources it is believed that the new polymerization process has so far outdistanced any other of similar nature that within a comparatively short time every large oil refinery will be operating under the Phillips' license. In addition to business received on a royalty basis, Phillips is constructing refineries both here and in Europe for competitors to use the new process.

During the past year, Phillips bought control of the Reda Pump Company, manufacturer of submergible electric pumps. Reda Pump will add materially to the line of equipment now manufactured by Phillips, inasmuch as Reda holds several important patents in connection with machinery used in deep-pand oil well drilling.

During the year 1935, the entire funded debt of Phillips, consisting of 5½ per cent debentures bonds amounting to approximately $20,000,000, was refunded with a saving of upwards of 3 per cent, representing a sizable income for the common stock. Funds for this purpose were secured to the extent of $15,000,000 from private loans and $5,000,000 was taken out of the company's treasury. A recent statement issued from the executive offices states that the January-February 1936 earnings were more than double those for the like 1935 period. March will record a substantial gain over a year ago. For the first quarter of 1935, Phillips earned 37 cents a share on the common stock.

TWO-MONTH Reports Show Profit

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Increases in all principal balance sheet items, including taxes. That is the story of the black ink Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway figures for the first two months of 1936.

Perhaps the most important thing from the viewpoint of the company's security holders is the fact February was the second month in succession in which a profit was shown.

For the two full months to date this year, Eastern reports net profit of $71,724, compared with a loss in corresponding 1935 period of $1881. In February alone the company earned net income of $35,682, whereas it lost $1065 last year.

First item on the balance sheet of Eastern that catches the eye in the manner in which the increase in gross finds reflection in the net earnings account. A gain of $87,878 in revenues for 1936 over 1935 travel down through the income account, practically without change when the net income balance of $71,000 is contrasted with net income deficit of $1881. Expenses for operation hardly differ from last year's standard at $780,911, up $455 from 1935. A reduction in funded debt interest and other miscellaneous appears to have reached the leverage point where gains in gross will now practically undiminished to net account.

* * *

Notebook: Case earnings for 1936 already estimated by the cheerful bulls long of the stock. . . . One source sets them at between $15 and $20 per share. . . . Reynolds Spring income also figured out by the guessers as likely to be around $3 to $4 per share for the year . . . Yellow Truck may pay off accumulations on the preferred in common stock . . . Sounds like a good break for the company . . . But remember General Motors owns 90 per cent of the preferred. . . . And tax reasons would make the common a better holding.

* * *

The cold blooded truth about the stock market for this week is that it failed miserably in the test of support at former levels. It never was able to lift within striking distance of recent peaks and they dropped in dangerously close fashion. From where we sit the answer lies in the lack of quality existing among the various leaders. Speculation concentrated in industrials almost to the exclusion of rails and utilities. And until this condition is altered for the better we do not think much can be expected.

* * *

Odds and Ends: Our hypothetical position has been trimmed down to nearly a month's work and nothing has happened to convince us a change is required . . . The market's load has been lightened since the line . . . It can not be blamed on foreign conditions or any of the handy excuses . . . For these threats passed and still the line bulged and held . . . The French monetary situation is now worrying . . . But here too fears seem overdrawn . . . If France goes off gold it should have but little effect here . . . And consequently such fears do not warrant poor domestic stock market behaviour.

TODAY'S SALES 660,000

STOCK Prices Close MIXED on COMMODITIES HOPEFUL

New York, March 28—Scattered stocks go back on their feet in today's brief stock market session in the face of further foreign monetary unsettlement.

At the same time many confused traders hugged the sidelines and there was moderate selling in several sections of the list. The close was irregular.

With the French franc dropping under the gold shipping point in the lowest level since Oct. 4, last, and the Dutch guilder exhibiting weakness, financial opinion grew hot and cold on the possibilities inherent in the situation abroad.

It was noted that the French Bank raised its discount rate from 3½ percent to 5. This was the first change in the rate since Feb. 2.

Commodities appeared more hopeful, with wheat and cotton somewhat ahead during the greater part of the business day. Bonds were mixed.

Shares Up

Shares getting up fractions to a point or more included U. S. Industrial Alcohol, which attracted a following despite its reduced 1935 earnings; Deere, Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Bendix, Omnibus Corp., Paine, Crosley Radio, Douglas Aircraft and Kennecott.

Unchanged to slightly lower were United Aircraft, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, North American, Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, Union Pacific, Santa Fe and Pennsylvania.

While the continued flight of French capital was still a disturbing market influence, some commentators expressed the opinion that a new crisis for the gold bloc countries should not be feared, for American securities.

The belief was voiced by a few observers that it is the gold outflow from France gets up any real momentum. Paris may put an embargo on exports of funds abroad. There were others, however, who entertained the belief that no drastic step toward franc devaluation or otherwise, would be taken by the republic until after the elections on April 26.

Wall St. Nervous

While Wall Street was still nervous over the European gold bloc crisis, time was found to study domestic trade developments.

The upturn in retail sales was exemplified by the report of the New York Federal Reserve agent estimating department store volume in the metropolitan area for the first half of March at 11 per cent above the corresponding period a year ago.

The total business of reporting wholesale firms in the same district for February was said to have shown an increase of 18 per cent over the aggregate in the similar 1935 month.

Among pleasing earnings statements for last year was that of Texas Corp. showing a net of $1.53 a share against 59 cents in 1934. A substantial decrease in profits, however, was disclosed in the annual statement of the U. S. Industrial Alcohol Co. which had a profit of $2.15 compared with $4.03 the year before.

The French franc, in initial foreign exchange transactions, was off 60.9% of a cent at 6.55½ cents, and sterling was ¾ of a cent easier at $4.94¾.

Washington Notebook

Washington, March 28 (AP)—New orders for hosiery booked in January by 281 manufacturers reporting to the census bureau totaled 6,561,619 dozen pairs, compared with 5,923,935 in December and 7,299,958 in January last year.

* * *

Unfilled orders declined to 6,013,637, compared with 6,154,964 for December, and stocks on hand decreased to 1,811,187 from 2,264,911 for the preceding month.

* * *

Resumption of the silver inflow from the United Kingdom, but at a much reduced rate, was recorded in the Treasury Department's weekly figures on metal shipments.

* * *

Imports of the white metal last week totaled $2,713,185, most of it from the United Kingdom, against $1,055,167 the previous week. Gold imports were only $1,185,660 compared with $756,794 in exports.

* * *

Moving with the higher level of traffic, employment on Class I railroads increased 22,535 or 2.3 per cent compared with January, 1935, the Interstate Commerce Commission says.

* * *

The total was 981,858. Adjusted for seasonal variation, the employment index rose to 57.3 per cent of the 1923-25 average from 56.4 in December and 56 for the comparable month last year. The biggest gain was in equipment maintenance men.

New England Police Stories

'Shine's Case'

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

N.H. Man Misses Rope Despite Slaying

This is the 53rd in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

John H. Noonan, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "The State of New Hampshire vs. Joe Shine."

Other stories in the series will be written by reporters whose by-lines are equally familiar throughout New England.

By JOHN H. NOONAN

As a pugilist, as a polisher of gentlemen's shoes and as a conversationalist of unfailing wit and of equally unfailing good humor, "Joe Shine," for many years, was one of Concord, N. H.'s, public characters.

He's still a character, today, though hardly a public character, since the steel bars and cement walls of the New Hampshire state prison at Concord guarantee his permanent seclusion.

Doing a life stretch for murder, Joe now enters no more prize rings, shines no more boots for members of the legislature and has only a limited audience for his wise-cracking philosophies.

It all started when Moses Goldberg, 62-year-old Concord merchant, was found beaten to death in his Stickney Block clothing store late Saturday night, February 2, 1924.

In Goldberg's pockets were only a few small coins, although his Saturday receipts usually totalled as much as $200.

Witnesses came forward to tell of a mysterious automobile supposed to have been seen standing near the Goldberg store at about the time of the crime.

They also told of the mysterious car's equally mysterious occupants —and their mysterious movements!

No two descriptions, however, seemed to be in agreement.

And then along came a series of "Ku Klux Klan" letters. These communications, addressed to Chief of Police George A. Kimball, informed him confidentially that Goldberg was only "Victim No. 1." There were soon going to be others, so let others than 100-per cent white, Christian and Protestant Americans beware!

All in all, the Goldberg murder was a puzzle. It might still be one today if some sharp-eyed sleuth—with jovial Sheriff George A. "Bert" Wooster getting most newspaperman's nomination for the unclaimed honor—hadn't discovered, on the floor of the Goldberg store, a little piece of hard rubber.

Rubber Butt Plate

There was blood on the rubber fragment. The store floor was bloody, for that matter.

But the piece of hard rubber was the link that was needed to forge an effective chain of evidence.

How much clever detective work had been done was never really made public, but a general outline of what had been accomplished was sketched on March 11, 1924, five weeks after the murder, when Joe Shine was arrested.

Joe's real name, though few knew it, was George L. Hause. He was 24 and a Negro.

Technical charges against the prisoner, when Deputy Police Chief Nic Moores booked him at the station house, was illegal possession of a revolver.

Within half an hour, however—Joe's gun now being in the hands of police—its rubber butt plate was found to be broken.

And the missing piece, as you've guessed, was the bloodstained bit of hard rubber, picked up from the floor of the Goldberg store!

That same afternoon, after County Solicitor Herbert W. Rainie had presented the evidence to the Merrimack county grand jury, an indictment was handed down charging George L. "Joe Shine" Hause with premeditated murder.

'Low in the Mind'

It appeared that Joe had been spending too much money. It appeared that he had owed Storeman Goldberg a bill and had been pressed for the payment of it. And it appeared that Joe had been in possession of the tell-tale revolver at the time of the crime and had subsequently hidden it behind a beam in a Bridge street livery stable where he often slept when he and his wife were on the outs, which was frequently.

Joe, himself, was greatly displeased by the situation following his arrest, and, being a man given to simple thoughts and direct action, he wasn't long in demonstrating his ire at his confinement.

Early on the morning of March 12, Joe pretended to be "low in the mind" and called to his cell, to assist him, former State Senator Fred Marden who was then a special police officer doing duty with the "night watch" at the Concord station house.

"Guess I've done wrong," Joe told Marden humbly. "Guess I gotta ask the Lord to forgive me, but I don' know how. I've heard tell you's a religious man, Fred Marden, and I'h askin' you now if you won't come and pray with me."

Marden had entered Joe's cell.

Now, vouched by what he took to be the Negro's naive faith, he did kneel in prayer, mottoning the prisoner to do likewise.

That was Joe Shine's opportunity. He had been waiting for it, and was ready to seize it.

From behind his back he produced a milk bottle, in which coffee had been brought to him.

But Joe was quickly out of the cell and on his way to freedom. In his path, however, stood chunky Deputy Vic Moore, not as young, perhaps, as he once was, but still a dangerous man in a rough-and-tumble.

All in a single motion, he kicked ex-prize fighter Joe Shine's legs out from under him—and brought lead-lined leather billy down with a sickening thug on the Negro's round skull.

All done, for the time being, with notions of escape, Joe tried other tactics.

Transferred to Concord's old Merrimack County jail later condemned and abandoned, he found himself under the jurisdiction of veteran peace officer Sheriff Wooster.

A sympathetic warden was "Bert" Wooster, but quick to deal effectively and harshly with prisoners who wished to experiment with "rough stuff."

So Joe Shine tried no break here. Instead he embarked on a hunger strike, asserting that the food was a plot on foot to poison him.

'Up to You, Sheriff'

After a week or so of this, Joe was hungry but still obstinate.

"Get my wife," he begged the sheriff, "and let her cook me some real victuals. Then I can eat all right, and we won't have no more trouble."

As fast as it was quick, came back her answer.

"Cook for that no-good husband of mine? I should certainly say not. This is the only time in years I've had a chance to live in peace—with no black and blue spots and no arguing, neither."

"This court can't order the woman to cook for a prisoner, if she doesn't want to," Judge Branch stated smilingly. "Seems it's up to you, sheriff."

meals. And he also stopped Joe's tobacco allowance.

"After meals—and that means meals you've put away like you might be—you can have a cigarette, Joe," Wooster promised.

On August 17, 1924, Joe, who had been a model inmate, was assigned to assist State Hospital Attendant George Roby with windows. Roby had a six-foot ladder.

With the half-hearted help of two fellow inmates, Joe overpowered Roby, bent him into submission, bound and gagged him and stowed him away under some stairs.

Although the hospital wall was 16 feet in height, Joe Shine, the one-time athlete, was able to stand on the six-foot step-ladder and leap high enough to reach the top of the wall with his fingers.

At Large 24 Hours

He remained at large for more than 24 hours, while state and city forces joined in one of the most intensive man-hunts in New Hampshire history.

Armed posses, under orders to shoot to kill, scoured all Merrimack County.

Crafts, in terror of his life and the lives of his family, fed the Negro, pretending not to recognize him. Craft's wife and children, meantime, fled through a rear door and hastened to give the alarm.

Suspicious of a trap, "Joe" gulped the food hastily and departed. Crafts found and loaded a rifle, recruited three of his neighbors, who were also armed, then followed the accused murderer down Bridge street, Concord, toward a row of coal sheds.

His knee splintered. Joe was obliged to surrender. He was returned to a cell in the Merrimack County jail, where his wound was dressed. His injuries kept him quiet until the date set for his trial, in early November, 1924.

Since that time he had suffered always with recurrent headaches, he said, and had been subject to fits of unreasoning temper.

He had even been too quarrelsome for his hard-boiled navy Joe admitted the Goldberg murder. He couldn't very well deny it, in the face of the evidence arrayed against him.

There was the gun and the blood-stained fragment of its butt-plate.

There was Joe's own bloodstained clothing, with State Chemist Charles D. Howard present to prove that the blood was human.

He had gone into the store to buy two neckties and a pair of gloves, he said, and he had showed some money with which to pay for them in cash.

Denied Robbery

Goldberg, according to his story, had reminded him of his debt, had demanded "something on account" right away. In the argument, Joe testified, Goldberg had hit him first, breaking one of his knuckles. Then, in "retaliation," Joe pulled the revolver from his pocket and had beaten out Goldberg's brains. The robbery Joe continued to disclaim.

The defendant, they said, was already in the early stages of insanity and must look forward to fits of unreasoning temper, the initial symptoms of increasing severity, followed by death sometime within the next few years—or, at most, be months!

Maybe the experts could make head and tail of those X-Ray plates. Not so the jury.

And the prosecution, of course, had to go and complicate the issue by producing X-Ray pictures of their own, hastily made of Joe's head by a Concord specialist, while the trial had been in progress.

And the judge, in accordance with the New Hampshire custom, sentenced Joe to be hanged Nov. 17, 1925, a year and two days from the date of conviction.

Appeals to the New Hampshire Supreme Court failed, but, in the governor's chair, was humanitarian young John G. Winant, a conscientious objector to capital punishment.

On the night of November 16, 1925, two hours and a scant few minutes before Joe Shine was to shuffle up the 13 steps of the scaffold which was waiting in readiness for him, his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by action of the governor and counsel.

His brain tumor, if he has one, doesn't seem to be bothering him.

"Joe's not really crazy," Dr Bolloff said, when Shine was making his frantic efforts to escape, "it's just scared crazy, that's all, thinking of the noose that's waiting for him."

Tomorrow in the Boston Sunday Advertiser the true detective series will continue with "Hingham's Kewpie Doll Murder Mystery," by Fred Perkins.

TO AMATEUR STAFF-MEMBERS:

An interview should be with some person, in authority, and about a timely subject. Real names make interesting interviews.

We are using as much art work as can be on the page, although there are many drawings and sketches which are still "tabled" for later publication.

BE SURE the contribution bears your name and address. If it is a drawing BE SURE your name and address is written on the back of it.

AQUEDUCT HISTORIC SPOT

Shawsheen Landmark Is Replaced by Need Of Modern Speed

Part way between Boston and Lowell, on the route of the old Middlesex Canal, there remains a fine old piece of engineering which rarely fails to attract the most heedless passerby.

Forsaken and neglected now for nearly a century, the old Shawsheen aqueduct has fallen into a state of deterioration not unsightly to look upon.

NEW BRIDGE

To stand on the new bridge and gaze on the stream rippling below recalls to mind how the canal boats, drawn by horses and oxen, used to ply here from Boston to Lowell, passing through twenty locks and seven aqueducts such as this one on their 27-mile journey upstream.

According to an old map of Boston, the canal coursed what is now Canal street, crossing the site of the Boston & Maine yards in Somerville, and skirting the Mystic Lakes to Horn Pond in Woburn.

From this point it is but a few miles to the famous Ox Bow Curve in Wilmington and the $5000 Shawsheen aqueduct.

VIEW RUINS

Its stony piers, now overgrown with moss, rise majestically from the valley below; a close inspection revealing that they hold together through no fault of their own—no mortar or cement of any kind having been used in their construction.

In years to come, will sightseers remember that neither storm nor flood rendered this old aqueduct helpless, but that the advent of railroads and a desire for speed caused its downfall?

CELEBRITIES ARE LOST TO MEDFIELD

Medfield, March 28—One by one, Medfield takes leave of her celebrities hoping vainly, perhaps, that some day there may be cause for them to replace them.

Perhaps ghostly echoes of Bartlett's "Dream" can be heard through the lonely, silent rooms of the Bartlett homestead, but little else is audible there since death took the 86-year-old widow of James Carroll Bartlett, well-known American singer and composer.

Mrs. Bartlett leaves no children or grandchildren to enjoy the home-spun elegance of the large, white rambling house, nor to cherish the memories of talent and achievement it has sheltered for so long.

James Carroll Bartlett, as aptly becomes a musician, was born in a town called "Harmony," in Maine.

STUDIED OPERA

It was not until middle life that Bartlett married Alice Hemant Austin, an able pianist who possessed marked literary ability as well.

Mrs. Bartlett was a native of Medfield, and the house that came to be known as the Bartlett homestead had already been her home for many years.

REFUGEES HOUSED IN CAMP

Camp Curtis Guild in Wakefield Haven for Flood Victims

Camp Curtis Guild, in Wakefield, is one of the most interesting of the scores of community centers given over this past week to Lowell flood refugees.

Shabby transients billeted there have moved out temporarily and busloads of bedraggled men, women and children now occupy the camp's sleeping quarters.

The youngsters are taking the adventure in their stride, blithely unaware of the seriousness of their predicament; and the women, past the hysterical stage, seem surprisingly resigned.

Thankful to be warm and dry and well-fed after the shock of the first few harrowing hours.

LISTEN EAGERLY

Soon they will be going home, they tell each other, and life will go on as usual—as though disaster had never overtaken them.

The bluff, kind-hearted lieutenant intends them to think that. But to welfare workers he shakes his head and says, "Our work here has only begun."

Sewage has got into the wells and typhoid is feared. Rehabilitation will take days, weeks.

POLISH WOMAN

But it is sad to watch the little Polish woman, whose 13-year-old son is unaccounted for. In her soft voice and broken English, she insists she must be back for work on Monday.

They keep to themselves, and the woman's eyes never leave her children except in sleep.

One can only hope that the other child will be waiting, in safety, for their return.

A LITTLE BOY'S BIRTHDAY

With eyes sea-blue and wide—

His feet too tiny now

An admiral! Our bonny boy with heart both gay and true.
Those big brass buttons you like now
Will some day shine on you!

And oh!—My smile will be

"Oh, Admiral, come back, my

Back to the Soil

Youthful citizens today are facing a dark outlook brought on by the past five or six years of unemployment.

With the exception of C.C.C. camps the government officials have failed to provide opportunities for these youthful Americans.

Even now C.C.C. camps are to close as the result of a new economy order issued at Washington.

The aged must be cared for. Without opportunity for youth, how can this be done?

Three to six acres of land would supply a man with enough provisions and dairy products to care for himself and his family. Only financial aid from the government could create such a program.

Back to the soil would not bring riches but youth would have its opportunity to live a normal healthy life.

AUSTEN LAKE

Peaceful Mr. Shore—

Eddie Seeks Quiet

Of Hockey Bench

Albany, N. Y., March 28

BACK IN BOSTON to pack his belongings after experiencing what he calls "the most outrageous injustice" of his hockey career, Eddie Shore speaks yearningly of the day when he can attend the games as a passenger instead of as a member of the crew.

AUSTEN LAKE

And though he claims the vitality to go on for some years and is, as the statesmen say, fundamentally sound, he thinks the time to quit is while he still feels fresh and before he exposes himself to the punch drunk martyrdom that comes from excessive poundings at the brain centers in a profession where the risks grow greater as a man grows older.

He is beginning to weary of punishment, so he says he will give himself just one more year before relieving himself of the load, of which he is becoming increasingly conscious. And, since he was always frugal with his funds, he has amassed some $50,000 in cash and farm properties with which to secure his old age. So he will offer himself to the Bruins as a player manager next fall with the privilege of benching himself the following year.

Shore Like Schoolboy

CAUTIOUS SAVING through his 12 years of hockey gave Eddie his 50 thousand, which is exactly the sum that his 12-minute incarceration last Thursday's game at Toronto cost his employers, in unborn profits from later playoff games. This was what he terms his "most outrageous injustice," for which the Bruins stockholders can find a more profane expression.

I think my favorite memory of Shore in the years to come will be as he sat in the prisoner's pen, brooding the minutes away like a school boy detained after school, and listening to the distant outcry of his playmates in the baseball orchard. He sat in his yellow headguard, twirling his hockey stick between thumb and forefinger and seeming on the verge of a tearful moment. I believe him when he says that they were the longest, most irritating minutes of his life. Also they were the most costly, averaging at reasonable estimate, $4166.66 for each of the dozen.

Hockey Rules Plastic

OF ALL OUR SPORTS, save only college football, hockey is most exposed to the mercies of officiating, its rules resting largely with the conscience and elastic interpretations of the judges. Baseball is a matter of specific law covering every possible situation and putting decisions up to the speed of an umpire's eyesight. But the varying degrees of personal fouls in hockey and football, are left to an official's sincerity and discretion, whether to be enforced or ignored, which makes these games the hardest to rule and its field-judges the most unpopular of their breed with the public.

Like the rule against the bean-ball in the major leagues after the killing of Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, in 1920, hockey and football rules are largely designed for the protection of the players. And like the death of Chapman, the Ace Bailey tragedy in hockey in 1934, was a great shock so that "charging" an opponent, previously condoned, suddenly became a heinous crime to be punished ruthlessly. But with both bean-ball and charging, the rules were more and more negligently enforced after the first wave of horror subsided.

The fact is that the Maple Leaf players, who were deeply indignant against Shore at the time of the Bailey disaster, committed the same atrocities in wholesale lots against the Bruins at Toronto, merely being more fortunate than Shore had been with Bailey, in not dashing anybody's brains out. So that the officials of the game, Bell and Cleghorn, merely called an occasional penalty from mass of infractions, and let the men rabbit-punch each other with their sticks and clout away to their heart's content.

Naturally their decisions against the Bruins seemed more glaring because, in this process of random selections, lottery-fashion, the officials chose to penalize the Bruins all at once, merely piece-mealed the Maple Leafs' punishments in small and painless doses.

* * *

Morale at Low Ebb

The Bruins' morale may have been at low ebb too, because of the divided feelings among the players toward Manager Frank Patrick, and his eccentric notions of amusement in the hours preceding the game. There was, in fact grave doubts in the minds of the newsmen attached to the team that Patrick would give his full attention to the game as the hours approached the face-off.

It appeared to call for drastic precautions. Thus Eddie Shore, as team captain, had a covert agreement with General Manager Art Ross to keep careful tabs on Patrick's zingalo manner and, if things went too sour, to signal Ross' box. In such a case Shore as to have taken charge of the team in mid-game and Patrick's powers were to have been summarily suspended.

As matters developed, affairs went off normally enough, although the players' knowledge of conditions must have upset their mental approach to the game.

There can be no question about Patrick's term with the club being ended. And another man, Shore or otherwise, named to take his place. The wrangle between Ross and his bench manager, resolves not merely into a jealous feud between antagonistic types. There were moments Thursday afternoon when a thoroughly unpleasant scene was brewing. So that the game was merely the steaming climax to an uneasy day in which excitement began in the Hotel Royal York and increased with a gradual crescendo until the last goal was scored.

TOURNEY Starts MONDAY

"BOWLAWAY" MAKES RECORD

By Walter Kiley

Three thousand soldiers of the alleys are massing at the starting point, waiting word to swing into step in this grand candlepin procession which, under the sponsorship of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser will march on for two full weeks.

Ages of competitors run the gamut from little 12-year-old Dorothy Yands, baby of John Tagg's Fitchburg alleys, to a score or more of veterans who have already passed the 80-year mark.

The American-Advertiser tourney is by far the largest of its kind ever held in New England. It gives promise of being the finest.

Prizes and trophies, medals, cups and merchandise amounting to thousands of dollars await the winners of the various events. In fact, the awards manage to delve far down into the also-rans before petering out.

Competitors are coming from every state in New England, with every large bowling alley well represented by the cream of their individual flocks, both men and women.

Aim of the sponsors was to attract the average roller and they succeeded. Many entrants are in there in the spirit of fun, hopeful and ambitious of capturing their share of the prizes, but primarily interested in trying their luck with experienced veterans.

Day in and day out the capacity of Joe Hynes' beautifully refinished and redecorated alleys will be tested. Every alley will be occupied every minute of every day for the next fortnight, with a definite schedule calling for all participants to report on the minute.

Eyes of the bowling world are centered on the Twentieth Century, as Boston, after many years, finds itself the capital of the candlepin universe.

Winners of the various divisions will be rewarded with gold medals, liberal cash awards, trophies and individual donations.

All are ready, scorers, judges and officials, schooled to the moment to make the first annual Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser "Bowlaway" the grandest success in modern bowling history.

Charlestown Hoop Finals Tonight

The final games in the two day basketball tournament of the Boys Clubs all over New England will be played off tonight at the Charlestown branch of the Boys' Club of Boston.

The winning team will receive a trophy cup, donated and presented by Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., president of the board of directors.

In addition, each member of the winning team, including the manager and coach, will be given a gold medal; while the second and third teams will be awarded silver and bronze medals, respectively.

PICARD Wins No.-So. TOURNEY

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28 (AP)—Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., won the North and South open golf championship today by defeating Ray Mangrum of Detroit, five strokes in an 18-hole play-off for the title. Picard shot a 73 for the round and Mangrum a 78.

The Hershey pro gained a two stroke lead on the outward nine by shooting it in 33 with both playing, against a 39 for Mangrum. After 12 holes he was eight strokes in front, and with the title looked away played out the round sturdily.

Picard and Mangrum tied at 288 over the regular 72-hole route, necessitating the playoff.

Gold, N. Y. U. Epee Star, Wins Title

New York, March 28 (AP)—Theodore Gold of N. Y. U. today won the Class A Epee title in the annual Intercollegiate Fencing Association championships. Gold scored 8½ points out of a possible 11.

Yale's sword-men finished the matches in the Epee division in addition with 22½ points good for a two-point leadership. The U. S. Naval Academy team, West Point Army tonight, has a chance of overwhelming the Eli swordsmen and thus capturing the title.

Dorothy Round Wins

Spurns Romance For Ice Career

Only 23, Sure She'll Improve for Many Years

By WILL CONNELL

Smiling Sonja Henie greeted Boston this morning as the city's sports public made ready to pack the Boston Garden tonight to welcome the world's greatest ice artist.

"It's wonderful to come here, where my friends have always given me so warm a greeting. I thought I'd be tired after skating for the third night in succession, in Philadelphia, but I only needed a few hours rest. I hope the ice is perfect tonight, as I can do my very best." Then she and her party went to the Ritz-Carlton to relax for a few hours.

Sonja later on denied the reports that she will wed soon after her return to Europe this summer. There have been two such rumors in recent months.

LOVES SKATING

"I'm very well satisfied as I am," laughed the dainty little lady. "And I have no plans at all for marrying anyone. I'm only 23 years old and since I don't have to train for the routine school figures of amateur competition any more, I know I'll improve for several years at least.

"After this tour is over and we return to Oslo, we'll start to make plans for next winter's tour, which will last the entire season. I see no reason for retiring, because I love to skate and it never has become tiresome."

Sonja is reported to be getting $6400 per night on this tour, which Dunn takes $1000. They'll earn their money. Last night in Philadelphia followed ten nights' skating in New York.

BRITISH STAR

Tomorrow they're back in the New York Garden, in Pittsburgh on Tuesday, and then four straight nights in Chicago. A few other appearances conclude the tour. Even after her expense loss, which is very heavy, Miss Henie should clear at least $25,000. Next winter the extended trip will run her earnings to the six-figure bracket.

Not bad at all, but not too much when you consider the energy she puts in. She skates close to fifteen minutes tonight, in the course of three numbers. Dunn, an all-around athlete who played through three rounds of the British amateur golf tourney a few years ago, says that four minutes' skating is almost as taxing as a hazing mile race, or three sets of championship tennis.

This is amazing since he's only been skating for six years. A natural aptitude, continued practice and high degree of confidence make him able to execute the more difficult figures at high speed. Jackie, more mature than his years would indicate, probably will go into business after a couple of years at this figure skating. Though now it looks as if manager Dennis Scanlon would build the sport into a far bigger thing than it ever has been.

There is plenty of color in the show in addition to Sonja's highlighted number. The ice will be in black checkerboard ice surface, eight batteries of colored floodlights, pipe-organ setting for the orchestra, and special backdrop scenery brighten the picture.

Audrey Pepps, acrobatic specialist of the U. S. Olympic team and Hendrik Loughran, both of New York, are newcomers to the Boston ice scene tonight. Joan Tozer, Polly Blodgett, Grace Madden and James Madden, George E. B. Hill are the Skating Club soloists. Mrs. Willis Fryer, a great solo skater as Kathleen Pope for many years is on the bill.

The opening number brings the snappy Uhlan's Drill with a large group of Skating Club members in action. The best of the other acts from last week's sparkling Arena carnival will be presented as a background to Sonja's show.

Hollywood

New Field For Skating Queen

Sonja Henie, here for the all star skating carnival at the Garden tonight, will head for Hollywood at the conclusion of this tour. The attractive ice queen will be given tryouts and a picture will be made with her as star. A natural actress with an appealing personality, Miss Henie may move into the full-time actor's field later on.

Moriarty, Fletcher Bow to Jordan

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 28—To the Bees' young prospective first baseman, Elbie Fletcher of Milton and Eddie Moriarty, former Holy Cross captain, lanky ungainly Baxter "Buck" Jordan is the figure of nemesis and his big ashen bat, the sceptre of fate.

Because the veteran, Jordan, is and always has been an uncertain fielder, Fletcher, then Moriarty and then Fletcher, again, had the opportunity to win the first base position.

Both failed. Fletcher because, though he is unsurpassed as a fielder by anyone in the National League he was weak at the plate, batting in fourth the weight of responsibility he nevertheless fears most of the demanded of a regular first baseman at the plate. Moriarty because the position was new and strange to him though he is a natural hitter.

While the experiments continued, The Bees found victories few and far between, but since McKechnie called off his youngsters and tossed the battle-scarred veteran into the fray, the plum has fallen to the Bees with fair regularity, and in every victory Jordan has played an important part.

Not until the second Detroit game at Lakeland did Jordan's name appear in a game lineup. Hitting in the ninth inning, Burk laced a single into left field planting in scoring position what appeared to be the winning run until the Tigers overcame the disadvantage in their own half of the ninth.

Since then Burk has come to bat 13 times, in which he pounded out an even half dozen safeties for an average of .462.

Agawam Official Seeks Brennan

Baltimore, Md., March 28—James G. Thornton, who resigned from Rhode Island commission in Baltimore and announced he and Edward J Brennan as racing secretary at Agawam. Brennan's almost sure to accept position with 48 years.

U. S. Star Loses

London, March 28 (AP)—C. M. Tozer, one of England's most methodical players today defeated Malcolm Kirkbride of the United States, 10-8, 15-7, 15-10, in a first round match of the English singles tennis championship at the Queens Club.

ROBERT DOWNS LUTZE; NOW AFTER O'MAHONY

Reverse Hold Pins Foe

By Jack Conway

It had been a battle of hammerlocks for most of the bout. Each wrestler used these holds with great effectiveness.

Robert and Lutze set a lively pace in the early stages of the contest. Nick made his big play with hammerlocks, and at times had Robert in distress. Yvon's courage was all that enabled him to withstand the pain as Lutze pressed his arm back.

LUTZE KICKS

Robert proved he is a master of difficult wrestling holds when he applied a head scissors and at the time held Lutze's left arm. Lutze kicked and wiggled, but it was five minutes before he could get clear of the French Canadian.

Robert later gave Lutze some of his own medicine when he applied a hammerlock with crushing effect. Lutze was in great pain, and his seconds were anxious to toss a towel into the ring. Lutze, however, insisted on continuing wrestling. He failed in his efforts to break the hold with a series of flying mare, but he later succeeded in getting clear of Robert by counting with an inside crotch hold, body lift and slam.

Robert was effective in the use of toe holds. A double toe hold turned Lutze over on his back, but Robert could not keep Nick pinned for three seconds.

Dempsey's Boy Wins Another

Chicago, March 28 (US)—Jack Dempsey's red-headed terror from Baltimore, Clarence "Red" Burman, brought the winning streak of Buddy Knox, youthful Dayton, O., puncher to an abrupt end by knocking him out in the fifth round of their bout, a scheduled eight-round main event in a series of heavyweight elimination bouts.

Burman subjected Knox to a murderous two-handed body blasting that discouraged Buddy as early as the third round.

JIMMY FOXX

By Jimmy Foxx

Sarasota, Fla., March 28—Our first winning streak broken, we're home hoping to start another when we face the world's champion battle here this afternoon.

It would probably do us more good, however, if we had the day to ourselves for a practice session. Judging from our showing against the Phillies in Winterhaven, we could stand a little brushing up on the fundamentals of baseball.

A more sloppy and stupid exhibition than we gave couldnt be imagined.

Poor umpiring doubtless had much to do with our poor performance as we took it on the chin eight to three.

"Lefty" Grove became so disgusted over the ball and strike decisions of Umpire Ballanfante that he wisely decided to throw balls the Phillies could hit rather than keep on hurling good strikes only to have them called balls.

RARELY BURNS

Personally, I rarely get "het up" over adverse decisions and when I do, I quickly cool off. I figure that umpiring breaks like all others even up over the course of a season.

But all players haven't the same disposition and same slant on things.

Grove loves to win and hates to lose. He's always taking strenuous exceptions to rulings he believes wrong.

He never, though, lets his temper lessen his effectiveness when he's pitching a game that means anything. If he did, he'd never have become the game's greatest southpaw.

His peeve is nothing to worry about. It shows he's in there hearing down and striving to win, which is unusual for him in exhibitions.

When the race starts, poor umpiring will never cause him to start coasting along. Instead, it will make him put on more pressure.

It wouldn't do for us to become so incensed that we'd make such costly mistakes as we made against the Phillies.

PRAISES FRITZ

All we had to cheer about when the game was over was the hurling of "Fritz" Ostermueller in the last four innings.

He has hit harder than in his previous start, when he turned in six scoreless frames, but once more he conspired his chores without giving a base on balls.

He has now gone 11 innings without issuing a pass. He can't miss being one of the season's second sensations if he can retain that kind of control.

Our kid pitchers get another chance today since the Tigers, a most dangerous American League foe, are furnishing the opposition.

Manuel Salvo and Lee "Lefty" Rogers, who were clawed by the Bengals last Sunday, get an opportunity to gain revenge. If they require assistance, "Slats" Bowers will endeavor to supply it.

Manager Joe Cronin is still determined to use none of his first-string fingers against our pennant rivals in exhibitions.

Tomorrow, however, the Phillies coming over here for a return tilt, will find Wes Ferrell aiming to become the first Sox pitcher to go the nine full innings this spring.

'Dizzy' Pays

Bradenton, Fla., March 28—Jerome "Dizzy" Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals, today has agreed to pay a $100 fine imposed on him by Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis for walking out on a charity game at Chattanooga last fall.

He has hit harder than in his previous start, when he turned in six scoreless frames, but once more he conspired his chores without giving a base on balls.

He has now gone 11 innings without issuing a pass. He can't miss being one of the season's second sensations if he can retain that kind of control.

'Caveman' Meets Jack Washburn

George "Caveman" Koverly will meet Gentleman Jack Washburn in the main bout of Alex MacLean's wrestling show next Wednesday night at the Boston Arena.

In two hours Koverly has established himself as the roughest wrestler ever to appear in Boston, making some of the other "bad men" look like peace envoys.

He wrecked two opponents and, in on last start, did so much damage to an Arena idol, Art LaGrant, in such a vicious fashion that the fans stormed the ring at the finish in a wild demonstration.

Both Medica and the youthful Yale sophomore broke Medica's old record of 2:11 3 and Macionis' intercollegiate mark of 2:10 5, but the powerful Seattle boy outdrove his rival through the last 20 yards to win his second championship and set his second record.

Carlesta Choice In 1st Race

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—REGULA BADDUN, FOURTH RACE

Tropical Park, Fla., March 28—W. Rosen's Regula Baddun, a frequent winner on Florida tracks, is accorded a standout preference over indifferent platers in the six furlongs of the fourth stanza here Monday.

FIRST—CARLESTA, SINGED, BROWN DAVID

CARLESTA, second to Say Do, has only to duplicate that most in race endeavor in order to quit the maiden ranks. SINGED, a brisk morning worker, figures to offer the contention. BROWN DAVIS is dropping down.

SECOND—PAGEANTRY, EXAGGERATION, MAPLE QUEEN

PAGEANTRY, dropping down from the overnight class she did take by one and lead from end to end in this maiden affair. EXAGGERA HOW on account of form, is still class. MAPLE QUEEN, a mover in one last trip for the rewards.

THIRD—CATHY II, HIGH HASTE, SIS ROYAL

Just cant pass up CATHY II in this mile affair. Recent efforts say that Phillips color bearer will be hard to stop. HIGH HASTE has been working sharply and is recommended by the clock. SIS ROYAL a slow beginner, figures next best.

FOURTH—REGULA BADDUN, BALMACAN, THRUSTER

REGULA BADDUN is dropping seven pounds off a smashing second to Coo Call, Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by BALMACAN. She finished close up to the top one only a few days back. THRUSTER holds plenty of class.

FIFTH—DONNAHONA, FLIRTY MISS PERRAY

DONNAHONA, beaten an eyelash by hour spot and Chenille performed as if a trifle shy on racing condition in that recent endeavor. Drops nine pounds and gets a beautiful assistant under a feather of 102 pounds. EL PUMA and MISS PERRAY are the main dangers. They take as named.

SIXTH—PIPES PAL, SWEET SUSAN, SEEDLING

SEVENTH—MADWIND, BENDER FIRST, SALLY D'AMOUR

MADWIND, who has been showing sharply in his recent workouts, is primed to go to the post at the right odds. BENDER FIRST a heavy going thing last trip, figures to offer the opposition. SALLY D'ARMOUR a faint-hearted trick, for the short end.

EIGHTH—TAUNTON, FAIR BALLOU, THE AENEAD

TAUNTON on general form, shapes up vastly superior to this indifferents as of late. PAYBACK dueled so much a card to await the spot. He shapes up strictly the danger. THE AENEAD should head the race.

FRICK Praises Own LEAGUE

NO LONGER A. L. FOOTBALL

New York, March 28 (INS)—There was a time when the American League looked on the National League as a haven and a refuge for ball players who had grown old and decrepit in the service of the junior circuit.

In those days the National seemed just a happy hunting ground for the Jack Quinns of the American.

But now, says Ford Frick, vastly full proxy of the National, the shoe is on the other foot. In view of Sunday's trade of Lou Zoccolo and Ray Mueller to Boston, Frick says, you must join a corps of rasteriff Natty Leaguers who are spending their declining days in peace and comfort in the American.

"The National," said Frick today, "is no longer an old man's home. There is a back to the youth movement in our circuit and in the future youth and speed will be the keynotes of our game.

Giants Oldest

"Probably the oldest club in our league is the Giants and they are by no means walking on crutches. All the others are loaded with snappy young fellows who can go places and do things. Some of these kids may pull a boner due to inexperience or nervousness now and then but they more than offset this with the dash and fire of their play.

"We are building with kids. Most of the Reds, for instance, are hardly old enough to shave more than once a week. The Cubs are young and never have I seen so many fine fast young sters as I saw in the Cardinals camp. It was a pleasure to watch them but I don't know what Frankie Frisch is going to do with all of them.

"Frankie has so many rookies they get in his hair. So has Connie Mack but the difference is Frisch's are all real ball players."

Frick refused to touch the question of Commissioner Landis' dodge from his job. He said Baseball Commissioner Landis will be in his office on the job as usual when baseball opens its season.

Bees Stronger

"However," says Frick, "there will not be a soft spot in the circuit next year. Any team could go into Boston almost assured of winning at least three out of four. But the Bees will be nobody's pound meals this time.

"The Phillies don't seem to have the punch they used to have, but they compensate for this by far better pitching and defense, and the Dodgers will give any team in the world a battle on any given day. They've got great pitching, so much of it in fact, that I shouldn't be surprised if Casey Stengel makes himself an old-fashioned trade before the season's a month old.

Guns of Gangland!

Adventurer Gets Front Row Seat At Waterfront Battle

By Floyd Gibbons

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Dave Caldin, of the Bronx, N. Y., doesn't ever want to be a postal employe. Not if he has to deliver mail. Dave got into trouble once, and it was all over delivering a letter. And ever since then he hasn't even wanted to write one.

FLOYD GIBBONS

This story is a peculiar tale of letters and axes—and murder! It started with a letter from a friend in Europe. Dave's wife got it. In it was enclosed another one—a very important message for a woman who lived on the lower East Side along the waterfront. The letter asked Dave's wife to deliver the enclosed message personally.

One November evening in 1923, just a couple of days after they had received the letter from Europe, Dave and his wife journeyed downtown to deliver the enclosure. It's a long trip from the Bronx to the lower East Side of Manhattan.

It was pretty late when they got there. As they walked through the dark, dingy streets along the waterfront, Dave remarked to his wife that he didn't like the looks of the neighborhood—that he wouldn't be at all surprised if they were held up before they got out of it.

Well sir, Dave didn't get held up. I can tell you that right now. But what did happen to him was a lot worse than any hold-up.

They got to the house on the East Side, and rang the bell. There was no answer. The woman who lived there was out. Neither Dave nor his wife wanted to go back home without delivering their message. They had taken a long trip in from the Bronx and didn't want to have to do it all over again. They sat down on the steps in front of the house and waited for the woman to come home.

An hour passed, and the neighborhood was getting more deserted every minute. It was during the time of Prohibition, and every day the papers were full of stories of gang warfare and murder. Dave told his wife he would wait until midnight, and not a minute longer. Then he sat back and marked time impatiently, waiting for the stroke of twelve.

There were only 20 minutes to go, but that 20 minutes dragged out like an hour. Two or three time Dave asked his wife what time it was, only to find that but a few minutes had passed. The street was all but deserted now, but from far down the street came the sound of men walking. The steps came nearer.

For the last time, Dave asked his wife to take a look at her watch. It was just twelve. Dave rose with a sigh of relief. "Let's go," he said.

Then, out of the gloom on the other side of a street lamp, a man appeared. Two others followed him. The first man was right in front of him as Dave reached the street. At the same time, the two men following closed in on the first. From their pockets they drew a pair of ugly blackjacks and began beating a tattoo on the first man's skull.

"What a skull that first man must have had," says Dave. "A horse would have been knocked out by one of those blows, but the big fellow stayed on his feet. Suddenly, he threw off his hat and coat, dropped them at my feet, and the fight moved out into the center of the street.

"At first blows, I froze stiff with surprise. After that, things happened so quickly that the battle was well on before I got over my first bewilderment. But as the three men reached the middle of the street, I saw something that made my hair stand on end.

"One of the two attackers raised an arm and I saw the flash of a hatchet, raised with the sharp side down, ready to split the single man's head in two. Then I forgot where I was—forgot all about what was going on before me, and let out a blood curdling yell at the top of my lungs.

Dave's shout was so loud that it stopped the man's arm from descending. Dave made a dive to go to the beleaguered man's assistance, but his wife grabbed him about the waist with both arms and held him tight. She had kept her head a darned sight better than Dave had. It would have been plain suicide to go out there among those killers.

By that time, windows were being thrown open and people were shouting and screaming for the police. But that didn't seem to bother the two killers. One yelled: "Finish the job—I'll get that other guy!" and he started for Dave.

Dave thought it was all up with him then. In fact, just one thing saved him. At that moment, the original victim broke away and ran, and both men turned and went after him.

The police came then, and Dave turned over the intended victim's hat and coat which were still lying at his feet. "I told the police the whole story," he says, "and then I left with my wife, glad to get away from the scene of that horrible nightmare. I was shaking like a leaf for a week afterward. And I don't want to be a spectator at any more attempted murders."

That's the yarn that wins the ten dollar bill for today. I've got lots more of them that sawbucks, too. So ship in your story. Monday we'll hear Colt Colburn's story—the dramatic tale that lies behind a simple picture postcard.

Meanwhile—carry the message!

HOLLAND BOSTON Faces Dearth In Stage Fare

By GEORGE HOLLAND

"Personal Appearance" will call it a Boston run a week from tonight.

Perhaps the customers will swarm into the Plymouth next week, and if this should come to pass, there is a possibility that a lot of bookings could be deferred. The probability is that the show will move on, however. With more than a year in New York to recommend it, "Personal Appearance," rated at least four strong weeks in Boston, is a pity. As funny a comedy about a Hollywood "personality" will not be written again in a long time.

George Holland

The opera had an effect this week on the business of both "Personal Appearance" and "On Your Toes," the Rodgers and Hart musical at the Shubert Theater. I suppose I should call it the Rodgers and Hart and George Abbott musical. Mr. Abbott gets credit on the program as co-author with the celebrated song-writing team. But he has not put in an appearance in Boston. These are crucial days—hours of re-writing and trimming and adding in the career of a big show. Mr. Abbott is best acting like an active collaborator.

* * *

"On Your Toes," in which Ray Bolger reaches the heights, will be the only occupant of a legitimate theater in Holy Week. It will remain at the Shubert until Wednesday, April 8. Until Saturday night of that week, Boston will have to do without a theatrical attraction—in case Boston cares.

The incumbent of the Shubert after "On Your Toes" will be "Night of January 16." Very recently the information that "Night of January 16" would come to the Shubert Easter Saturday was given out in this space. You can rely on it.

* * *

Mary Young's "Storm Child," a play about a lighthouse, will have its premiere at the Copley Theater on April 13. Production of "Stormy Child," which has been known also as "Fifth Nurse," marks Miss Young's resumption of activities at the Back Bay house. It is her second original production. The first was "Katy-did," by her own authorship.

* * *

Excepting these sparse items, the theatrical cupboard is as bare of delicacies as it has ever been in the Easter season. "Tobacco Road" still looms formidably on the horizon as a problem for the censors, but its Boston fate is extremely problematical. If the censors pass "Tobacco Road," a fortune awaits the producer who can finance local productions of "Maya," "The Captive," "Shanghai Gesture," and—although the picture version is called "The Three" and it is current at the Loew theaters—"The Children's Hour." If "Tobacco Road" gets by, the censors will never have an answer. "The Children's Hour" was the best play of 1933, in this opinion.

Lovely Irene

Irene Dunne, real favorite of the films, plays the lead in "The Magnificent Obsession," which comes to the Gayety as the featured attraction on Sunday.

Unknown Scores
Child Actress Steals Honors

By MARION FRENCH

"These Three," which opened at Loew's State and Orpheum Theaters yesterday, is one of the most flawlessly acted, intelligent and tasteful films ever produced.

Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon are the picture's stars and Joel McCrea is its featured player. Their work here very nearly reaches perfection. In spite of the presence of these seasoned actors, however, an unknown child actress, Bonita Granville, comes close to stealing the picture.

Her characterization here as an infant terrible who messes up the lives of three adults with her psychopathic lying is about the most stirring and powerful performance ever seen in pictures.

Lillian Hellman, author of "The Children's Hour," an outstanding stage hit, has managed to re-write her play for the screen without the loss of its dramatic punch and suspenseful situations. "These Three" has been expurgated, it is true, as "The Children's Hour," from which it was taken could never be considered a fit subject for cinematic purposes, but it remains a most moving and impressing play.

The action of "These Three" takes place for the most part in a girls' school in New England. Two college chums, played by Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon, have started a fashionable boarding school with the aid of a young doctor of the community, portrayed by Joel McCrea.

One of the pupils in the school is a troublesome miss, characterized by Bonita Granville, who is given to lying on every occasion. When she is punished for her bad habit the little demon thinks up a way to get revenge on her teachers.

Her vicious gossiping falsehoods, which involve her instructors and their doctor friend, very nearly wreck three lives. When she receives her just desserts at the end of the picture, applause is heard from the theater's patrons, which gives you some idea what a fine little actress Miss Granville is.

BONITA GRANVILLE MERLE OBERON JOEL McCREA

The little girl, Bonita Granville, seated on the sofa in the above action picture from "These Three," film feature at Loew's State and Orpheum, comes near stealing the acting honors from the other stars. Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea, shown at the right, are the adult stars along with Miriam Hopkins. The other two children are pupils in the school where the action of the film takes place.

Marlene Dietrich Will Co-Star With Boyer

Los Angeles, March 28—Marlene Dietrich's unsettled plans were definitely settled when she agreed to co-star with Charles Boyer in "The Garden of Allah" for David O. Selznick with Richard Boleslawski directing.

All these color tests she has been privately making were so satisfactory that she cabled Alexander Korda to ask him to postpone his picture for an additional two weeks. The combination of Dietrich and Boyer is interesting. You will remember they started together in the ill-fated "Hotel Imperial" at Paramount and Marlene bowed out after Ernst Lubitsch refused to be signed.

Louella O. Parsons

Merle Oberon, who was to have been starred in "The Garden of Allah," the great play which has brought so many actresses to fame on the stage, will now do "Dark Victory," originally chosen for her and which she feels is better suited to her. "Dark Victory" is also in Technicolor.

Fred Astaire moved all his belongings back on the RKO lot yesterday and was there rejoicing! All the little differences have been ironed out with Freddie starting work immediately on "Never Gonna Dance." His arrangement with Pandro Berman, who is producing this gay number, is that he will stage all his own dances with Ginger Rogers, while Hermes Pan will do the ensembles. George Stevens will direct and Victor Moore, Helen Broderick and Patricia Wilder (Broadway's Honey Chile) have all been summoned to start work. The settlement is being kept quiet but my inside information is that Fred had nearly everything his own way.

* * *

Jack Warner never had any idea of making a Shirley Temple picture when he produced "The Story of Louis Pasteur." He just wanted entertainment and to pay tribute to a great man, but it is now being used to spread the gospel of health. U. S. Senator McKellar of Tennessee, who is trying to get an appropriation of one and a half million dollars for national health service, mentions "The Story of Louis Pasteur" as an illustration and a prominent life insurance company is also using it in their booklet.

Just heard the funniest story about George Murphy who is to be Eleanor Powell's dance partner in her next MGM movie. He has a butler who served him for several years as dresser when Murph was on the New York stage. The other night he asked permission for two hours off.

"What happened?" asked George.

"Well, sir," was the reply, "I won the contest and am appearing as a local cafe for a week's engagement."

MARIE PREVOST'S big heart throb is DICK PURCELL, Warner contract player; JIMMY TOWNSEND coming in for some kidding when someone wrote that JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON'S latest heart beat met her at Albuquerque and patted her hand all the way into town; it was only JIMMY, her legally wedded spouse; HELEN TWELVETREES with CY BARTLETT and other friends at a prominent cafe; JIMMY STEWART needs only three more hours to have got a pilot's license; ROSALIND RUSSELL receiving a full grown oak tree as a gift from an Eastern admirer; not a bad present. That's all today. See you Monday.

'Sutter's Gold' Lively

"Sutter's Gold," the screen attraction at Keith's Memorial Theater this week, is the film translation of the life of General Sutter, an adventuresome gentleman of the Nineteenth Century.

His flight from Switzerland, where he was falsely accused of murder and his experiences enroute to California, are vividly portrayed in this film.

Edward Arnold has the role of General Sutter, the high-born gentleman who struggled through many hardships before reaching what he thought was the pinnacle of success in life, when he finds himself an owner of California land upon which gold has been found, his character changes. He becomes enamoured of an English duchess, played by Binnie Barnes, and turns on his best friend, a man who has followed him all over the country, in lean as well as fat days.

This film has more excitement than any one picture should contain. We see General Sutter at his pal, played by Lee Tracy, in many places and tough situations before they reach California and prosperity. They meet an unscrupulous slave trader in the Sandwich Islands, battle him on sea, have friendly and otherwise experiences in Mexico and end up old and broke in Washington where they try to recover their land in California.

* * *

Edward Arnold is convincing as Sutter, especially so during the latter sequences of the film. He does a remarkable characterization of the old general in his last days while fighting for justice in the capitol. Lee Tracy is entertaining as Sutter's companion, even if he is not believable as a pioneer. Binnie Barnes is charming as the English duchess and Katherine Alexander does a fine bit of work in the role of Mrs. Sutter.

Minor parts are well-taken and there are thousands of well-trained extras used in the film's big scenes. One of the most spectacular of these is a view of many natives of the Sandwich Island diving into the ocean from a ship on which they are held captive.

'Colleen' Is Another Powell-Keeler Hit

By MARION FRENCH

Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler have one of their best vehicles to date in "Colleen," the Metropolitan Theater's new picture. This handsome and talented team have a smart scenario, an all-star cast of supporting players and a most lavish and spectacular setting in which to carry on their screen romance here. What more could any young acting couple ask for in Hollywood?

Joan Blondell and Jack Oakie are also featured in "Colleen" and you can be sure that Miss Blondell has one of her famous wise-cracking roles. Oakie, of course, is cast as a somewhat blustering individual, who manages to fool several ladies into believing that he's a big shot though he hasn't a dime, has a very amusing plot. Hugh Herbert is seen as an eccentric millionaire who nearly messes up the lives of a number of people concerned in the film's story. Mary Kessler is his bookkeeper and at the beginning of the picture she is engaged to Jack Oakie, a gent who has big ideas but has to borrow carfare.

* * *

When Dick's dizzy uncle has a nervous breakdown and gives up his little gold-digging friend, plenty of lawsuits result, you may be sure, but Powell and Miss Keeler are the happy couple at the picture's fadeout, as is to be expected.

Paul Draper, a newcomer to filmdom, is Miss Keeler's dancing partner in this picture. He is every bit as talented a tap dancer as Fred Astaire and has much class. We will be very much surprised if this lad doesn't go far in pictures.

* * *

Dick Powell is at his best while singing love songs to Miss Keeler in "Colleen." His songs are catchy and delightful. Louise Fazenda, as Hugh Herbert's wife, provides many laughs, and Hugh Herbert's antics as the dizzy millionaire are rib-splitting. Joan Blondell is great as the gold-digging, ex-chocolate dipper, and Oakie ditsies as usual in his part.

The Metropolitan's stage show, "Spring Frolics," is mighty entertaining. Eddie Garr brings down the house with his clever impersonations and jokes. The Three Sisters do some remarkable harmony crooning, and Dick and Dot Remy amaze with their intricate acrobatic stunts. Edgar King, Wally Brown, Annette Ames and Natalie Ames add their talents to this exceptionally fine program.

Symphony Excels in Bach, Mahler Program

By RUTH MARSTERS

Yesterday afternoon in Symphony Hall, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a magnificent performance of a program devoted to Mahler and Bach.

In Dr. Koussevitzky's illuminating and emotionally inspired interpretation of Mahler's Ninth Symphony, with which the program opened, its utmost significance was revealed with a vividness and power that made it profoundly moving.

Both this Symphony and Bach's Third Brandenburg Concerto in G major are admirably suited to bring out the rich tonal quality of the orchestra's celebrated string choirs and never have they performed more superbly than on this occasion.

The Sinfonia to Bach's "Christ lag in Todesbanden," which separated the two Allegro movements of the concerto, provided an excellent contrast in mood while it did not break the continuity of the whole.

The program, which will be repeated this evening, was closed with Alfredo Casella's transcription of Bach's Chaconne for violin, unaccompanied, which is dedicated to Dr. Koussevitzky and was given its first performance in the United States on this occasion.

This, the most recent version of Bach's great masterpiece, draws upon the full resources of the modern orchestra, but does not appear to us as successful as some of Casella's other efforts in transcription.
